Indian Supposed To Have Given Clue To Missing Men

QUEBEC, June 24.—The forestry service today started on a new inquiry into a possible clue to the fate that befell Nungesser and Colli, the French trans-Atlantic flyers.

G. C. Piche, chief of the forestry services, received a telegram from a man named Tremblay, living at Bersimis, stating he had met an Indian who had given him "some interesting particulars about Nungesser and Colli," and that he would send a letter concerning all he had learned.

Forestry officials are making inquiries into the matter.

Although all clues up to the present have failed to yield any actual indications of the fate of the two flyers, after a conference between Premier Taschereau and Minister of Lands and Forests Mercier, the government has decided to continue its searching.

BRITAIN STICKS TO PROPOSALS LINDBERGH ASSUMES AIR CAREER

United States Not Favorable To Reducing Tonnage

GENEVA, June 24.—Great Britain has refused to withdraw, or at present modify, the proposals which it has made to the tri-partite naval disarmament conference here regarding the reduction of the size and life of capital ships, the International News Service learned today.

Hugh Gibson, chief American delegate, suggested to the Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, chief British delegate, that the proposals be withdrawn since they are not within the scope of the present conference, but Bridgeman declined to withdraw the proposals but agreed to give the American delegates a complete memorandum elaborating on the entire scheme of the British for reduction of capital ship construction programs.

"Great Britain always has been most desirous of obliging the United States and meeting President Coolidge's wishes in furthering his and the Washington government's disarmament desires," Bridgeman told Gibson. "Great Britain has been and still is working for limitation at least, if not reduction armaments."

"The British government has been of the opinion that any proposal to reduce or further limit capital ships was in furtherance of America's peace policy."

Bridgeman even went so far to threaten to demand a plenary session of the conference next Tuesday in order to force Gibson to state fully and publicly the American position as regards capital ships.

British spokesmen have made no effort to hide their annoyance at the manner in which their proposals have been received by both the United States and Japan and they declare that the United States delegates are introducing minor matters and are uttering sentiments "as thin as air."

In particular the British are offended that the United States has brought up the question of the large British marine and the question of this merchant marine being readily adaptable to fighting purposes in time of war.

Bridgeman advised Gibson that Great Britain was willing to discuss the possibilities of its merchant marine being converted into war vessels, but he said he considered such discussion useless since in case of war all liner and other ship would be armed for defense and every other purpose.

When Bridgeman's refusal to withdraw his capital ship proposals had been received by the American delegation, Gibson informed the British lord of the admiralty that the United States is not desirous of reducing the maximum tonnage of destroyers below 8,000 tons.

CLASH IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, June 24.—Landing troops from foreign warships and nationalists have clashed at Chin-kiang, according to dispatches received here.

Nationalists numbering fifty, under a Chinese officer, raided the Jardine Matheson hulk at Chin-kiang on Thursday and fired upon a party from the warships which came to drive them away.

The three brothers confessed in Jacksonville, Ore., late yesterday that they had killed four members of the crew of a gold-laden train during an attempted holdup in the Siskiyou mountains. The confessions ended a four-year campaign by postal inspectors to bring the bandits to justice. Nearly a million dollars was spent in the search.

The confessions of the three brothers followed Hughes' conviction of the murder of Charles Johnson, brakeman of the raided train. When the jury recommended life imprisonment, Hughes made a clean breast of his part in the crime. The confessions of Roy and Ray, immediately afterward, filled in details of the savage deed.

TEXANS COMING

CLEVELAND, June 24.—The "Good Will" delegation headed by Governor Dan Moody, was to arrive here this morning for a day's visit. Governor Moody was scheduled to speak during a noon-day luncheon at the chamber of commerce, following an informal dinner tonight, the party was to attend the German Saengerfest, then leave for Chicago.

A thousand dollars went to the winner, and $500 to the runner-up with smaller cash prizes for other contestants.

Senator Jones, who has just left the capital by automobile for a 4,000 mile drive to Seattle, believes that the senate calendar might well be cleared of the Pennsylvania and Illinois "slush fund" contests and the way thus paved for the immense legislative program the Seventieth congress has before it. ADVENTURER DIES
ON MURDER CHARGE

CHICAGO, June 24.—Ellin Lyons, Colombian soldier of fortune, was hanged in the county jail today for the murder of Julian Bonfield, police officer, killed during a holdup.

The youthful South American adventurer went to his death calmly. He maintained his innocence to the last, claiming Policeman Bonfield shot himself accidentally.

Twice saved by last minute writs, hope for a third stay was dispelled last night when a delegation, headed by Dr. Albert G. Benavides, Colombian consul to Chicago, failed to obtain executive clemency from Governor Small.

AFTER CONFESSING MURDERS

SALEM, Ore., June 24.—Atoning for one of the widely-advertised crimes in American history, three young brothers, Roy, Ray and Hugh D'Autremont, started life sentences in the Oregon Penitentiary today.

The three brothers confessed in Jacksonville, Ore., late yesterday that they had killed four members of the crew of a gold-laden train during an attempted holdup in the Siskiyou mountains. The confessions ended a four-year campaign by postal inspectors to bring the bandits to justice. Nearly a million dollars was spent in the search.

DROPS BOYISHNESS TO BECOME SERIOUS BUSINESS OFFICER

Once Carefree Flyer Now
Involved In Conference

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Dropping his boyishness as one slips out of an old garment, Charles A. Lindbergh, "the flying kid," today assumed the role of a man of large affairs. He has a career—commercial aviation—and the old carefree flying days, the youthful abandon, and the wild celebrations that marked his flight to Paris are all behind him.

The smiling, daring youth who became the world's hero by virtue of his happy abandon now moves from conference to conference, an important factor in national projects, a companion of serious minded men who want to have his life insured.

Only six weeks ago life was an endless gay round of flying; today there is the conference with the secretary of state about a trip to Canada, a visit to the office of the postmaster general to discuss his future status in the air mail service, a meeting with the Canadian minister to the United States, and finally a conference in a de luxe hotel suite with New York interests eager to enlist a new member for a board of directors.

As little as a week ago, Lindbergh was still riding the streets of the land greeting riotous multitudes who acclaimed him for an epochal achievement of youth. Yesterday Colonel Lindbergh steamed down the Potomac for three hours aboard the official yacht of the secretary of the navy, accompanied by his St. Louis backers and half a dozen government officials, with whom he discussed his future plans in a solitude worthy of a cabinet meeting. A week ago he came and went at will flying now at night and again by day, today in this plane and now in that. Now he has an engagement calendar, like a railroad president, and cannot tell you even when he is going to fly to New York, which he hopes somehow to achieve today or tomorrow.

Last night he dined at the home of Hanford MacNider, assistant secretary of war, surrounded by high officials representing four departments of the government, and then slept in the home of the secretary of commerce where everything is arranged for the accommodation of serious discussion.

Aside from the fact that Colonel Lindbergh is now a "career man" in commercial aviation, the first series of conferences here settled nothing. There are hundreds of propositions to be considered before a decision is made, and these are matters for conference.

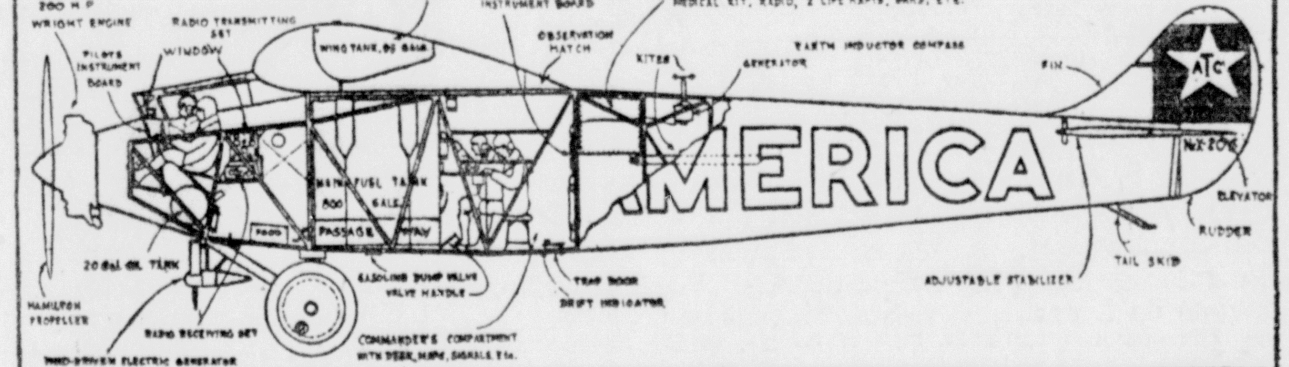

Meanwhile the little silvered monoplane, "The Spirit of St. Louis," whose descent from the blackness over Le Bourget electrified the world, sits riderless in Cavernous hangar in St. Louis, awaiting again the magic touch of the young man who has "arrived."

Today more conferences were scheduled. Lindbergh hopes to get away for New York late today or tomorrow, but his plans were not definite this morning. It depends upon the conferences.

MAYOR INDICTED

CLEVELAND, O., June 24.—Facing trial on an indictment charging him with embezzlement of over $1,000 in state and village funds, Mayor J. C. Tegg, of Newburg Heights, Cleveland suburb, was to be arraigned before Common Pleas Judge Walter McMahon today. The indictment followed a recent investigation by state examiners.

HOW BYRD TRANSOCEAN PLANE LOOKS INSIDE

This drawing reveals the interior arrangements of the giant plane with which Commander Richard E. Byrd hopes to prove a commercial trans-Atlantic airplane practical. Bert Acosta, pilot, and George Noville, navigator and radio operator, have positions in the front cabin; while further back, in the observation hatch, are the stations of Commander Byrd and Bert Balchen, observer. It is from this observation hatch that will emanate the data on storms, winds, etc., eagerly sought by science. Sketch prepared by Aero Digest (New York).

Frank Carter Admits Forty Three Murders—Began Killings In 1895—Convicted For Shooting Omaha Man.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 24.—Applauded by a crowd of thousands, Frank Carter, the Omaha sniper, calmly accepted his death sentence in the electric chair today.

Before going to the chair Carter, who had killed forty-three people in his life, declared he was ready to die.

He included in this list the unsolved Vilissa, Iowa, as murders of more than fifteen years ago, when an entire family was wiped out. Prison officials, however, scouted his story.

Carter, who from the first contended he was ready to die and who laughed at the efforts of his attorneys to secure a stay of execution, showed he was ready this morning. He walked from "death row" to the execution room and chatted with the officials there as he was strapped in the chair.

"Be sure and fix this right," he remarked, "so that it will get me the first time."

He asked that the black mask

Insanity Plea May Save
Life Of Butcher's
Slayer

CLEVELAND, June 24.—The fate of Ernest Frederick, former Warren Ohio Steel Company employee, charged with the murder of Walter Holcomb, Warren butcher, last February 28, was to be placed in the hands of the jury here today. If found guilty of first degree murder Frederick must hang, as Holcomb was shot dead on government property—in the Warren postoffice—and federal law decides such a penalty.

If the accused man is released on the insanity plea which his attorneys have made for him, he faces incarceration in an asylum. A warrant is now in the hands of a deputy U. S. marshal here, following the filing of an insanity petition in Warren Probate Court, and will be served if Frederick is freed of the murder charge.

Holcomb was killed when Frederick, returning to Warren, after an absence of two weeks, was informed that the former had been paying attentions to his wife.

Allienists for government and defense have disagreed on the defendant's sanity.

CORONER RETURNS VERDICT OF SUICIDE IN ADSHEAD DEATH

George Frederick Adshead, 22, Stockport, Eng., special Antioch College student, committed suicide May 27 by drowning in the Little Miami River.

This was the verdict rendered Friday morning by Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, coroner, just four weeks after the youth disappeared. The verdict followed an inquest held June 15 at which evidence indicated that Adshead had carried out threats of self-destruction indicated in a note left when he disappeared. His body was found by fishermen June 5.

The verdict supports the theory maintained by this newspaper from the first. This newspaper declared the death was a suicide when the body was discovered and phrased several times that this would be the verdict of the coroner, in spite of sensationalized accounts printed in other papers hinting

MACHINE POISED TO FLY WHEN OBSERVER
FINDS WEATHER BAD

Commander And Crew
Disappointed By Last
Minute Warning

ROOSEVELT FIELD, MINN., June 24.—Perched proudly on an incline leading to a long runway here today is the giant silver-bodied, gold-winged monoplane, America, ready to wing its way toward Paris at a moment's notice.

It was to have flown at dawn this morning, but at the eleventh hour, after final preparations had been made, the hop-off was postponed indefinitely because a storm suddenly burst over the coast of Newfoundland.

Commander Richard E. Byrd and the three men who will make the flight with him were deeply disappointed, and so were several thousand persons who swarmed over Roosevelt Field eager to witness the start of the epochal expedition.

"I thought sure we were going this time," said Byrd, who is "fretting over the repeated delays. I hope it won't be long before we do go. And we'll go the moment the weatherman gives us the word that conditions are right."

But the weather man who is advising Byrd does not think the American can take off today. He is James Kimball, United States Weather Bureau meteorologist. It was Kimball's report shortly after midnight that prompted Byrd to delay the hop-off.

"They certainly will not be able to go today, and Saturday is too far away to make a prediction," was the pessimistic comment of Kimball.

As last minute preparations for the take-off were being made amid great excitement at the flying field, Kimball telephoned the report to Byrd.

It was a night of excitement at the hangar. Throughout the evening automobile came in droves with persons eager to see the take-off. Several thousand people swarmed over the field as the America was towed to the trans-Atlantic flight, and all around the hangar there was a tenseness that has not hitherto prevailed.

Fifty-eight uniformed policemen stood guard near the hangar, keeping the crowd beyond roped off spaces. The spectators, however, were orderly.

Precisely at 8:10 p. m. the America was wheeled along a narrow railway in the hangar to a position directly in front of the hangar where it was jacked up and weighted. The beam tipped at close to 14,500 pounds.

The procedure was supervised by Bert Acosta, who will pilot the plane. He was assisted by T. Harold Kinkade, expert on motors who previously had put his O. K. on the three motors of the America. Then, with policemen forming a semi-circle about it, the black nose of the plane was turned south in the direction of the incline from which the take-off was to be made.

Acosta climbed into the cockpit and the plane was taxied across the field under its own power. It moved slowly in the dusk of the dawn and was followed by about 1,000 men, women and children. The plane stopped in front of a five-foot first incline. Ropes were stretched for a hundred yards on both sides of the incline to keep the crowd back.

Food supplies were then brought to the plane. Tony Argan, Hempstead restaurateur who supplied the Chamberlin-Levine expedition, came rushing across the field in a car with two roast chickens, ten cheese and turkey sandwiches, three quarts of coffee and two quarts of tea.

Without warning, at 9:45 p. m. a gale blew up over the field, followed almost immediately by a drenching rain. The crowd scurried for cover.

For a few minutes they seemed to be a possibility that the plane would be blown over. To prevent such a disaster, the plane was lashed by ropes to Kinkade's car. Kinkade started his automobile and pulled in the opposite direction from his the wind was blowing. This kept the plane upright until the storm blew over.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the plane was pulled up the incline by a tractor.

Then, shortly after midnight, the telephone in the hangar rang. A newspaperman answered it.

"This is Byrd," said the voice on the wire. "The hop-off has been postponed. Yes, the same old reason, a storm—this time over Newfoundland."

Herman Swonger, Dayton, O., was re-elected president, and Rebecca Downing, Concord, Mass., secretary, of the Antioch Pioneer Society at the annual meeting and reunion of the organization at the home of Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College, in Yellow Springs Wednesday night.

Forty students, who were among the first to take the course of instruction under the new plan formulated by President Morgan in 1921, attended the meeting, which was spent in a social way.

The society meets once every year and is expected to become a permanent institution, keeping alive the memories of college days and renewing old acquaintances.

A number of letters were received and read at the meeting from early students, who were unable to be present.

A picnic will be enjoyed in Antioch Glen Friday from 11:30 to 1 o'clock, and the president's reception will take place between 3 and 5 p. m. All the activities will be held out-of-doors, weather permitting.

The Theatre

By Fleet Smith

NEW YORK, June 23.—It is curious to note what tremendous popularity has been attained by the college story in the films. Bebe Daniels started the whole thing with "The Campus Flirt," it was carried along by the five Paramount Junior Stars in "Rolled Stocking," and now Bebe is going to do it again in "Swim, Girl, Swim."

An interesting feature is that, of course, in the news reels, and the pictures and the stories, in addition to being extraordinary popular among audiences throughout the country, are very well done, offering unusually good photography and continuity, with sensible plots and good directing.

Strong support for the stars is being provided by Paramount in these college pictures, too, the firm going so far for Miss Daniels as to put Miss Gertrude Ederle, the swimmer of the English Channel, under contract to support Miss Daniels in "Swim, Girl, Swim."

This is the first time Miss Ederle has been in the movies, except, of course, in the news reels, yet simple, stories of everyday folks, depicted in simple, effective and dramatic style. An unusual example of this type of picture, which has long been a crying need in the pictures, is Janning's new picture, "The Way of All Flesh," which he has just finished. It is the first American-made film of Janning's and contains a number of powerful dramatic moments. It is simply a story of a middle west banker of German descent, whose lifetime record of honesty and domesticity is shattered through the work of a gold-digger.

A simple little story, told and acted well, and it contains more punch than a number of the smashing big pictures put together.

The "heroes of the day" are having their flare, all right. Paramount has signed Gertrude Ederle and everyone in the motion picture business has tried to get Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to sign a movie contract. The latest word along "movie row" is that Lindbergh will sign no movie contracts now or later. Paramount with "Wings" just finished and started on its way, is planning another air picture. It is by John Monk Saunders and is to be called "The Legion of the Condemned." Invitations have been extended to Col. Lindbergh to come to New York from wherever he is at the moment to see the premiere of "Wings." The picture is to run at the Criterion theater in New York and the opening is set for August 1.

XENIA MUSICIAN'S PERFORMANCE PRASED

The technique of Miss Juanita Rankin, Xenia pianist, who played the dedicatory program on the Knabe grand piano, a part of the dedicatory program at the Greene St. Methodist Church, Xenia, O., Monday night, was appreciated by the throng of people who attended the recital.

A Piqua music critic had the following to say of Miss Rankin's part of the program: "Miss Rankin is a musician worthy of her recommendation" and she came up to every expectation that could possibly be entertained.

Miss Rankin has a precision of touch and fullness of tone that is marvelous and her program, which she played without music, fully satisfied the most critical of her audience.

"Miss Rankin played three numbers that included 'The Lark,' by Balakreiw, 'Fantasy in F Minor' by Chopin and 'Bacchante in A Minor' by Rubenstein.

"As a finale to this marvelous performance, Benjamin C. DeCamp, Cincinnati and Miss Rankin played 'Raffs,' 'Cavatina' as a duet with the organ and piano. It is extremely interesting to know that these musicians had only played this duet together but once, as they had only met one another Monday afternoon, and with but a single rehearsal, they played this difficult composition with utter perfection."

AUTHORITIES SEEK XENIAN WANTED FOR HOSPITAL ESCAPE

Once more authorities of two counties are searching for Noble Nooks, colored, Xenia, who escaped from a Hillsboro hospital last Saturday, immediately following a minor operation.

He had been removed to the hospital from the Hillsboro jail last week and escaped by crawling through a window.

Nooks had been confined in the jail since April, having been sentenced on a liquor charge, ment that the negro dared make the attempt in his physical condition, following the operation.

Several Xenians are reported to have visited Nooks at the hospital and it is thought they may have assisted him to escape.

Nooks was arrested more than a month ago by Xenia police for Hillsboro authorities, from whom he had escaped some time earlier.

BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD'S GENEROSITY.—O God, let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God shall bless us. And all the ends of the earth shall fear him. Psalm 67:5, 7.

DANGER IN WRITING

A woman, filing an answer to her husband's suit for divorce, quoted from a book he had written. To her the philosophy expressed in the book was intolerable. It spoke for independence and freedom for the wife as well as for the husband, and emphatically argued against writing letters. For the wife the book was proof that her husband personally entertained every belief expressed in his book.

How much of an author's private conviction crops out in his fiction it is difficult to say. The public, and critics as well, are certain to form pictures in their minds of authors from their works. The reader finds a novel delicate, charming, brightly written, and imagines the novelist possessed of the same qualities. But often he finds he is a 200-pound, bewhiskered individual.

If the words uttered by characters in a book are to be thrown in the teeth of their author, so that he is caught up by them and compelled to pay alimony, novelists will have to guard their speech, write anonymously or remain celibates. They should consider the advice to letter-writers: "Do right, and fear no man; don't write and fear no woman."

The only proof the wife had that her husband's writings reflected his opinions seems to have been that he practiced, toward her, his preachment against letter writing. But neither book nor wife divulged whether the author disapproved of writing letters because he thought it indiscreet, wasteful or merely unnecessary. By now he, no doubt, is convinced that writing books is as dangerous as writing letters.

THE CURSE OF CONTENTMENT

The most vital thing in civilization is that "man never is, but always to be blest."

Whenever any man, this nation or this world considers itself as greatly blessed as it is necessary to be, it will be time for Gabriel to sound a loud, clear call. It is our belief that tomorrow we shall be in better circumstances, "tomorrow we shall have achieved wider fame," tomorrow we shall have greater vigor that prevents our degenerating to the lowly simian. If you believe in distant ancestry, or to the state of Adam and Eve if you don't.

Contentment means the life of the snail which has gone unchanged through a few million years or so while other animal life was changing all about it.

No progress is possible when we are contented with ourselves and with our surroundings.

The Way of the World

THE BEST REQUEST

A man in an eastern city died not long ago, leaving an estate of nearly $5,000,000. His bequests were not unusual. The disposition of his money made no sensation. But he wrote a paragraph to his children in his will which contains more sound sense and is more important to those who will read it and think about it than the mere details of how and where he left his money. He said:

"Be frugal and generous, charitable according to your means. Always love, respect and assist one another. Remember your best friend is your purse, and when that is empty friendship is but a name. As a result of my knowledge I admonish you that your mother is the heart of the family. Continue to cherish and love her. She shares your every joy and sorrow."

SHOW YOUR IGNORANCE

To question a wise man is the beginning of wisdom. Many of us are too timid to ask questions. We are afraid that our question will show that we are ignorant. We pass by opportunities to learn, we pass by things we ought to know about and that we could easily find out about because we lack the nerve to ask questions. Most successful people are questioners and listeners. The man who is willing to risk getting a reputation for ignorance in some things by asking questions is the man who makes himself an expert.

MAKE FAILURES PAY

Philip D. Armour, who made Armour & Co., walked all the way to California in the early days. He wanted to find gold. The journey took him six months. When he got there he didn't find gold. All he found was a job digging for those who had got there first. That was a bitter disappointment for Armour. He came back to Chicago and founded a great fortune. Did you ever have a bitter disappointment? What did you do then? Are you disappointed now in something that didn't go over? What are you doing? Are you quitting or are you going on?

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

By Marjorie K. Rawlings

SPORTSMEN'S WIVES

The golfer's wife, poor thing, poor thing, Puts up with almost everything. Her meals are scorched, warmed-over, late, And served to language profligate.

The motorist's wife, poor hurried thing, Spends all the summer on the wing. She counts that moment sweet and blest When punctured tires enforce a rest.

The sailor's wife lives all alone, And picks a solitary bone. She would embrace the chance, poor thing, To put up with 'most anything!

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C KELLY

BEING RESOURCEFUL

In the editorial office of a big newspaper, one morning about 2:30 o'clock, a man came in, a man who was not a reporter, but a man who was a friend of the managing editor and a young reporter sat talking about nothing in particular. They were enjoying the time that comes with the knowledge that the day's work is about over. Suddenly the foreman of the pressroom came rushing in, greatly excited, to tell of grave difficulties down below.

"That water main out in the street had burst," said he, "and can't possibly be repaired for several hours. And there's not enough water in our boilers to run the engine for the presses. How are we going to get any water? Goodness knows, I don't. And he made a despairing gesture."

It was indeed a serious situation. Even a few minutes' delay in going to press would mean that the earlier editions of the paper would miss their trains and that thousands of subscribers would not have their paper at the breakfast table. A longer delay would be even worse.

"Well, I'm at the end of my string," added the pressroom foreman. "Maybe you can think of something to do. I'll have to be done quickly."

The young reporter was awestricken over the responsibility that had been placed on his shoulders. He had been handed the burden of doing the impossible, and, moreover, he must do it instantly. The one person who took the whole thing calmly was the managing editor.

Whistling softly to himself, with apparent unconcern, he turned about in his swivel chair to the telephone and called a number. Having got his number, he asked for a man, he knew.

Briefly he told this man what had happened, and asked: "Couldn't you give us a line of hose long enough to reach up the street to some other main, so we can get our presses started? We'll appreciate the favor." The man at the other end said he would, and the conversation ended. The boss had simply called a friend at the fire department. In a few minutes a rattle of a hose wagon could be heard outside, and the problem was solved. The young reporter was breathless with admiration over such resourcefulness, but the managing editor had not the slightest idea that he had done anything unusual. To him it was simply one of many items in his day's work. That was all it was—just doing the simple, obvious thing. Resourcefulness is often just a matter of common sense.

Keeping HEALTHY by Dr. A.F. Currier

PSYCHOLOGICAL QUACKERY AND MENTAL HYGIENE

In a recent number of the Mental Hygiene Bulletin is an interesting article on this subject, for it deals with a variety of impostures which is very prevalent today and appeals to a great many people who are very much concerned about their mental states and conditions and are very anxious to look into the future so far as it relates to their welfare.

It is in the same class with astrology, fortune telling, palmistry, phrenology and many other cults and isms which have just enough truth at their foundation to make them unreliable and undependable.

The people who practice this form of pseudo-medicine are known as "practical psychologists" and "character analysts," and I suppose they are offshoots from psycho-analysis which, when practiced by one who is really informed and who understands his business, may be, and I believe often is, very helpful.

These practical psychologists regard to be properly called dangerous, because they appeal to the weak points in the nature of those who consult them, flatter them, desire for money, ambition for social prominence, eagerness for success in politics; in fact, they forcibly suggest the story of the witch of Endor. This is to all intents and purposes a phase of the gambling disposition, a desire to get something for nothing, a feeling that there is an easy way to get what you want if you can only get the right kind of a tip.

Few gamblers succeed permanently. The majority of people find it necessary to get whatever they may acquire by hard work and not infrequently with the interposition of hard knocks.

The article in question believes that these practitioners are an injury to the mental hygiene movement which is gaining more and more hold upon communities throughout the world. They certainly are.

The lectures and conferences in which they appear are full of high-sounding phrases, full of foolish promises and entirely calculated to dupe and deceive the unwary. Naturally enough they denounce the regular medical profession and try to make their victims think that those who have acquired solid information by hard work are humbugs, and that they, the short-cuts, are the real thing.

Well, old P. T. Barnum was not very far out of the way when he insisted that the American people loved to be humbugged. If they do not enjoy the sensation they certainly show them selves very easy victims.

Moral: Keep to the middle of the road and don't throw your money on shysters, of whatever breed or variety.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

W. McC.: Please give me some information in regard to acne indurata. Have been treated unsuccessfully with sulphur, ichthyol, etc., and would appreciate any suggestions you might give concerning systematic treatment.

Answer.—The less you interfere with acne, especially acne indurata, the better, as a rule. It is a self-limited disease, sure to disappear in time, though it may take years. Have patience, take daily warm baths and castor oil every night before retiring. Some have had success with serums and vaccines, especially autogenous vaccines, but none of them are infallible.

"Our flag is not a symbol of a static condition and a complacent sentiment, but of the inventive skill and the restless eagerness of trained ability for which our unparalleled unprecedented opportunities are the result."—Secretary of State Hughes.

"Do you realize the number of laws you are called upon to understand and to obey? Why, this present congress in one hour will pass more laws than all the parliaments of Europe in one year. They are trying to regulate every form of human activity from the setting of a hen to the burial of a horse. There is nothing that is not supervised—horse racing, movies, personal relations—nothing escapes."—Augustus O. Stanley, ex-governor of Kentucky.

"I should like to add to the Little Old New York for all inhabitants of great towns, and especially for all such as dwell in lodgings, boarding houses, flats, or any other sordid substitute for home, which need or foolishness may have contrived."—George Glasling, English author.

"A recent report indicates that in one year in the United States 49,141 new laws were proposed and 16,298 were enacted. In fact, when contemplated from a twenty-year standpoint, the figures are startling. In that period 954,625 laws were proposed, and 235,563 were enacted. Men whose business is to keep track of the laws are unable to keep up with it, to say nothing at all about the man on the street. I think it goes without saying that a great many of these laws could have been avoided by the enactment of general statutes taking care of minor matters that are not of sufficient importance to have placed upon them the dignity of a special statute."—Governor Alfred E. Smith.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

KEEPING A WELL GROOMED LOOK THROUGHOUT A SUMMER DAY

To retain a well-groomed look in summer requires considerably more effort than at any other time of the year. During the spring, fall and winter days, if one starts out with the proper kind of a foundation in the morning, except for an occasional freshening up during the day, not much additional self-care is necessary. But in the sweltering days which we will be subjected to during the next two months, one must continually be giving thought to both appearance and feeling of comfort, if she would not look fairly disheveled by the time evening arrives.

This is especially evident with the business woman. The woman in the home usually has more time to devote to self-care, and her activities are not so strenuous as those of the business woman. The latter is constantly on the go, both mentally and physically, and gets little time to think of herself from the minute she comes in the house in the morning until she returns at night, outside of perhaps powdering her nose once or twice during the day.

Therefore, the make-up with which she starts out in the morning must be applied carefully so as to withstand the counteracting with which she comes in contact during the hours away from home.

The daily bath is of prime importance, and during the summer months I advocate the tepid bath at night for immaculate cleanliness and a cold shower in the morning for stimulation of circulation.

After the bath the next important step is to properly prepare the face for the make-up of the day. Considerable attention should be given to this part of your toilette, because much of the freshness of your appearance throughout the warm hours depends on how carefully you prepare your face in the morning. To avoid a flushed, shiny face, and retain a rose petal complexion throughout the day, there are several excellent foundation creams and balms which prevent the appearance of an undesirable shiny nose and make one's complexion doubly adherent.

Aside from this many women prefer to use one of the summer washes which are so efficacious in overcoming excessive oiliness and shine and in preventing the over-flushing of the skin as well as excessive perspiration.

Considerable attention should be given to this part of your toilette, because much of the freshness of your appearance throughout the warm hours depends on how carefully you prepare your face in the morning. To avoid a flushed, shiny face, and retain a rose petal complexion throughout the day, there are several excellent foundation creams and balms which prevent the appearance of an undesirable shiny nose and make one's complexion doubly adherent.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, June 24. — Little Old New York life:

THE FEMINIST

George and Jane were graduated from the same co-educational university in the high tide of the feminist movement. George, who has always been anxious to seem fair-minded, modern in ideas, and liberal in thought, conceded to Jane without a struggle that women were the mental equals of men and that women should be given full right to economic independence.

After his graduation George entered a law office and presently his intelligence and diligence was rewarded in an income sufficient for him and Jane to marry. Before he proposed, he had had many talks with Jane on the subject of marriage and they had arrived at the satisfactory conclusion that it should be an arrangement where the wife would not be dependent upon her husband for whatever money she needed.

Jane had a job on a radical magazine where she got $25 a week. True, she lived with her parents, but she bought her own clothes out of her salary and even when she was married and after a time Jane had to resign her position on the magazine temporarily while she gave birth to a child.

When she came back again, she employed a nurse at $20 a week to take care of the child, and retained her general housekeeper who also did the cooking at $22 a week.

Jane found that after a day in the office she could not bear the discomforts of the subway when she got into the habit of taking a taxi home each night. This meant $7.50 a week. Her lunch money came to about $10 a week, and often she called up her husband and suggested that they dine in town.

In time, it cost her husband about $50 a week for Jane to keep a $25 a week job.

A New York novelist, married and the father of a child, fell in love with another woman, a fact which his wife discovered, and some time after the discovery, she divorced him when she was unable to win her husband back.

The novelist wrote two realistic novels describing his drama. His novels of course were presentations of the case from his point of view. Later the other woman wrote a novel presenting the domestic drama as she saw it. And now the wife has written a novel presenting the case from her point of view.

The public has now had ample opportunity to satiate its curiosity about the novelist's private life.

On the day that Colonel Lindbergh landed at the Astor and went from there to the Times building, an impetuous young woman broke through the police lines and threw her arms about the hero, attempting to kiss him. Lindbergh shielded away, blushed and avoided the kiss. The police grabbed the young woman and pulled her away from him.

Whether or not this episode became the basis of a story that continues to grow, I do not know, but the story is this: that when Lindbergh stepped out of the elevator on one of the floors of the Times building a stenographer threw her arms about him and tried to kiss him; and that five minutes later the young lady was fired for "conduct unbecoming a Times employee."

The second time I heard the story, it was not one young woman but two. The third time, the number of young women who had unsuccessfully tried to kiss Lindbergh and had been fired had grown to three, and now, as I understand, the number has grown to five. All fired five minutes after the episode.

Walter Winchell reports that the night Colonel Lindbergh was entertained at the Long Island home of Clarence Mackaye, he and his mother excused themselves early and went to a party at the Frazee's at which Irving Berlin and Mrs. Berle (the former Ellin Mackaye), were guests.

The fishermen on the docks along the East River water front are an interesting species. Fishing with them is apparently as much a rite on Saturday afternoons and Sundays as golfing is with brokers. They sit on the docks for hours at a stretch, angling with long poles which they rarely move. The catching of a small perch is a great event. All the other fishermen in the immediate vicinity amine it and comment upon it. Most of these fishermen are content to sit on the docks all day long with nary a nibble.

The Players' club revised Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" recently and members of the club had great fun doing it. Those who had no experience in acting, many of them, took part in the mob scenes. Some young women were engaged for the mob scenes also, mostly girls out of college and friends of the members of the club.

Don Marquis was at the costume party to get a new young woman, who told him she had to get two costumes for the play. She was to be a market-girl in one scene and in another carry a palm as a slave girl.

"At first they had me down as a 'real vixen,'" she told Marquis. "But they took a good look at me and decided to let me carry a palm."

These brash youngsters have a sense of humor. All honor to them.

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of St. Joseph, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their household easily, happy homes are the result.

Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?

FIREMEN SLUG WIN OVER POSTOFFICE TEAM WEDNESDAY

Firemen slugged their way to a 23 to 8 victory over the Post Office team in the opening game of the "B" division of the Xenia Playground League at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Wednesday night.

Winners piled up a safe lead in the early innings and enjoyed a fat round in the third, scoring eight runs. The firemen scored one or more runs in every inning but the sixth.

The post office nine found Cope, pitcher on the winning team, something of a puzzle, and could do little in an offensive way until the eighth inning when it tallied four times.

Kivania Club plays Central High School in a soft ball game Thursday night.

Post Office lineup: Cope, c; Gaines, p; McCoy, 1b; Lane, 2b; Love, ss; Christopher, 3b; Davis, rf; McCormick, cf; Walker, lf.

SUPREME COURT TO REVIEW DUGAN CASE

Motion for an order directing the Court of Appeals of Greene County to certify its record in the case of M. J. Dugan against the state of Ohio, was allowed by the State Supreme Court Wednesday.

Dugan, proprietor of a billiard hall and soft drink establishment on N. Whiteman St., was convicted of possession liquor by Mayor John W. Prugh and fined $1,000 and costs.

The conviction was affirmed by Common Pleas Court and the Appellate Court, but Dugan contended Mayor Prugh did not have jurisdiction in the case and attacks the validity of the court.

This extra range and activity of Hudson power, as every one knows, are advantages exclusive to the Super-Six principle. It can never be confused with any other car.

In every phase of performance there is effortless ease, from its smooth, swift getaway, to sustained high speed, and back to the soft instantaneous stopping action of its four wheel brakes. Power is so smoothly delivered in all ranges of performance that you are scarcely conscious of it.

With the development and increased capacity of the Super-Six principle came also the creation of a chassis engineered in every detail to provide safely, continuously and economically for the speed, power, and safety of the motor.

A ride will convince you, with the increasing thousands, that it is the "World's Greatest Value."

Oklahoma's Got Bad, Bad Man Again

Not since the days of Al Jennings has life been so interesting in Oklahoma. Matthew Kimes, a shooting fool, is the latest to dedicate his life to the revival of the good old bank robbing days in the Sooner State.

(International Illustrated News)
By L. E. EARLY.
TULSA, Okla. (I-I-N Special).—There's just a little bit of pride in Oklahoma these days.

For Oklahoma again has a wild, shooting, stealing bad man—a bad man who kidnaps police chiefs, robs banks, and boasts of his crimes.

While his maraudings are a bit of a strain on the smaller communities, nevertheless his presence is a comfort to those who glory in the State's frontier ruggedness and who have long twitched under the fumes of Eastern visitors who have come seeking shooting handouts and scalping Indians, only to find Rotary clubs, sandwich shoppes and garage-men with New York ideas of charging. In fact, these last few years much local pride in some parts around here since Al Jennings reformed and emigrated to California.

The new bad man is Matthew Kimes, just turned twenty-one. Peace officers credit him with all the daring of youth and the skill of experience. He's quick on the draw, and he loves danger. He comes out in the open, apparently, just for the fun of being chased.

Kimes introduced himself a short time ago when he led his gang in a series of raids on banks in Oklahoma and the surrounding States. Each raid was marked by theatrical gun play. As posses formed, the gang retreated into the wooded Osage Hills, where it's most unhealthy to go hunting armed men.

Kimes made one mistake, that of getting married. Bandits should eschew romance. His wedding picture was used to identify him after he was captured in a chase following a bank robbery. Matthew was convicted of murder in connection with the robbery, and his brother, George, was convicted of manslaughter.

Last November six members of his gang laid warlike siege to the Sequoyah County jail and delivered Matthew. Kimes resumed his guerrilla tactics with renewed vigor. A short time ago he raided the bank in his home town, Beggs, and escaped. An officer was killed and a woman injured.

On June 7 he calmly motored into Pawhuska and parked his car. He was recognized and sped off as a posse formed. When the pursuit got hot, Kimes abandoned his car and went on foot across fields.

He came upon an automobile driven by "Red" Carter, a farmer, just as his pursuers' cars closed in on him. He commandeered Carter's car and, hugging Carter close to him, sped away. Officers held fire to protect Carter, and as soon as Kimes had outdistanced them, he threw Carter out and disappeared in the woods.

A week later George McAninch, head of the peace force at Jennings, stopped a stolen automobile. The driver submitted readily to McAninch and his possemen left. The next thing they saw was the car speeding back through town. McAninch a prisoner. McAninch was found several miles out of town, tied to a tree. The driver had disappeared into the wood again. He was Kimes.

They're still looking for him.

LEARNS OF DEATH

Mr. Earhart, with his wife, was returning home from Newark, when the accident occurred. He leaves his widow and four children.

COMPEL INSURANCE OFFICIALS TO PAY BACK BIG SALARIES

State Department To Refuse Licenses To Some Firms

COLUMBUS, O., June 23.—William C. Safford, state superintendent of insurance, today was preparing plans designed to compel secretaries and managers of a number of mutual insurance concerns, operating in Ohio, to pay back into the treasuries of their respective companies portions of alleged excessive salaries and commissions.

This contemplated action is consistent with the decree issued by the Ohio supreme court here Wednesday upholding the action of the state insurance department in refusing to renew the licenses of the National Mutual Insurance and of the Celia Mutual Casualty companies to operate in Ohio until E. J. Brookhart, Celia secretary and administrative officer of these concerns, paid back alleged excessive salary payments.

The supreme court ordered that, of the $202,000 he received during the past six years, Brookhart should pay back $112,000. The court permitted him to retain $90,000, on the basis of a $15,000 annual salary, it was stated.

The annual salaries of officials of similar companies, doing practically the same amount of business, are $2,000 each, it was claimed.

"It is evident that the court is of the opinion that any profits of a mutual insurance company belong to the policy holders and that earnings over a reasonable salary for officials and necessary operating expenses should be returned to the policy holders," declared Safford.

COAL MAGNATE IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

COLUMBUS, O., June 23.—Funeral services were being arranged here today for John Sutphin Jones, 78, president and chairman of the board of the Sunday Creek Coal Co., who died at a local hospital last night after an illness of six weeks from chronic nephritis.

Jones, born at Washington C. H., had an eventful career as a railroad man and coal producer in the middle western states. He organized the Jones and Adams Coal Company at Springfield, Ill., and started when an incautious policeman arrested Albert Harris of Chicago, who a local innkeeper said, was trying to beat his board bill. Not until the police department, aided by a small motor truck, had got Harris as far as the jail was the discovery made that the prisoner was too big for the jail. Harris, who weighs 423 pounds, was pulled and pushed into the doorway, but there he stuck, and the combined efforts of the night force at police headquarters couldn't budge him. Under the strain the prisoner fainted, and it took the fire department to remove his weighty torso from the front entrance.

STUDENT KILLED
MILLERSBURG, O., June 23.—Paul Hawkins, 24, was instantly killed when he was crushed by a two-ton block of stone, while working at the Briarhill stone quarry at Glenmont, near here. He was a sophomore at Ohio State University, and had just started to work in the quarry. Another workman with him was injured.

NO FAT MEN JAILED
PEORIA, Ill.—Police officials here are surely perplexed. A weighty problem has their nerves on edge, and the authorities are exercised to decide whether or not they shall build a bigger jail or insist on smaller prisoners. It all

BENEFICIARY SUES INSURANCE FIRM; TWO SEEK DIVORCES

Joseph Lamb, as beneficiary under an accident insurance policy carried with the defendant company on the life of Mrs. Lou Robinson, for $2,000, has brought suit in Common Pleas Court against the Kentucky Central Life and Accident Insurance Co. to collect $1,500, alleged due on the policy.

Lamb, in the petition, sets forth Mrs. Robinson was accidentally killed in an auto accident January 3, when a car driven by William Robinson, in which she was riding from Dayton to Xenia, collided with a machine driven by the Rev. A. J. Furstenberger.

Mrs. Robinson either jumped prior to the collision to prevent being injured or was knocked out of the car by the impact, but in any event was accidentally killed, the petition recites.

All premiums on the policy have been fully paid plaintiff declares. He sets forth that he is unable to read or write, that he did not have possession of the policy at any time, and that the insurance firm, taking advantage of his ignorance, compromised the claim with him for $500. Lamb wants the compromise rescinded and the policy paid in full less the $500 credit. F. L. Johnson is plaintiff's attorney.

Plaintiff charges the defendant with being a person of vicious and vulgar habits and wholly unfit to be intrusted with the care of the children. He asks custody of the children.

Suit for divorce has been filed by Alberta Osborne against James Osborne on grounds of extreme cruelty. They were married May 5, 1908 and have two children, Thelma and James. Plaintiff charges her husband threatened to strike and molest her. Defendant owns a 100-acre farm with a large amount of stock, farm implements and the usual household furniture and plaintiff asks custody of the children, alimony and attorney fees.

GIVEN DIVORCE

Edward Mowen has been granted a divorce from Anna Mowen in Common Pleas Court on grounds of gross neglect of duty.

Warns Middle-Aged
Women To Watch
These Danger Signs

Thousands of women at the changing time of life are in serious danger because of poisonous waste matter accumulating in the system, polluting the blood stream and overworking the heart and kidneys, often resulting in chronic hepatic torpidity, gall bladder inflammation or even gall stones.
The symptoms—danger signs—should be closely watched are: dizziness, headaches, shortness of breath, gas in stomach and bowels, pressure or sharp pains in right side that often shoot through to the back, coated tongue, bad breath, lack of ambition, weakness, nervousness, and nights of restless misery.
Failure to heed "these warning signs" in time may mean months or even years of miserable ill health and perhaps a dangerous surgical operation!
Everyone near or past middle life should guard against hepatic torpidity or any form of gall bladder trouble. And in the opinion of the writer one of the best things in the world for conditions of this kind is the inexpensive home use of Klax-Ko tablets, which Sayre's Drug Store or any other good druggist supply on a binding guarantee to refund their cost, if genuine beneficial results are not obtained inside of a week. "Klax-Ko" tablets have brought new life and health to hundreds, and they must positively do the same for you or their use will not cost you a penny. —Adv.

vene both, houses, or either of them, on extraordinary occasions. It is Senator Jones' view that the "state of the union" next winter will be so momentous in character, from the standpoint of matters requiring congressional action, that Mr. Coolidge should not hesitate to exercise his prerogative. Otherwise, the senate whip fears, the Vane and Smith controversies may consume so much time that a serious legislative jam would ensue.

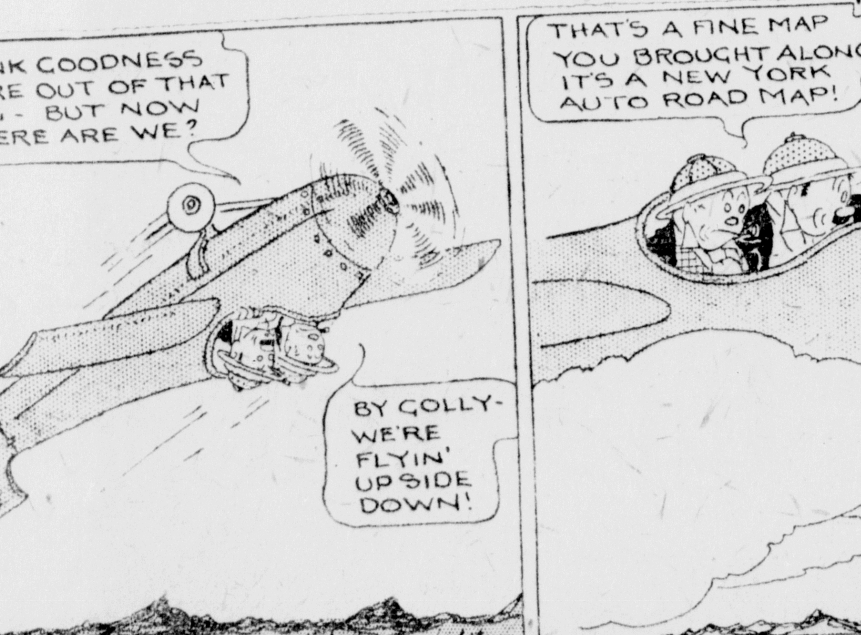

"At no time since the war that I can remember," said Senator Jones to this writer, "has congress faced so important and urgent a program. If there were nothing but the Mississippi flood situation, that of itself would almost be enough to tax the time and energy of both houses for weeks on end. But there's the equally urgent issue of revenue legislation, with the certain prospect of many projects for disposal of the treasury surplus, and the renewed demand for agricultural relief is likely to claim quite as much attention. I have thought that if the senate could be summoned and concentrate on the Pennsylvania and Illinois election cases, old of the senate, as Mr. Smith

HALITOSIS? KILL IT!
Seven times in ten, Halitosis is due to a sour, gassy stomach, caused by intestinal stasis, or "Constipation." People with halitosis (unpleasant breath) are shunned, avoided, because they are like a "plague"—friends just can't endure being near such a person. Old and young, rich and poor, none escape if fermented food remains in the body more than 24 hours. Even if the remainder of foul, decaying matter, that can only be removed with a thorough cleansing, such as Blackburn's Cascara-Royal Pills produce. This sweet little pill is "Better than Castor Oil."

Its action is pleasant and prompt, stomach, liver, spleen and intestines all are benefited. The effect is so different from ordinary laxatives, salts, calomel, etc. A smooth, abundant action from the very first dose, soon rids you of all the disagreeable symptoms.
Let the whole family learn the value of Blackburn's Cascara-Royal Pills, 45 pills, 50 cts. at drug stores.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

We're off for a picnic and a lot of fun. And we won't come back 'till the set of sun!

Such were the thoughts of the Ritzies as they clambered up on the hayrack that was to carry them out to the Methodist Sunday school picnic. The twins, Rag and Tag, weren't Methodists, but Patsy, Marty, Bill and Betty Ann were and their teacher had said it would be all right for them to invite the twins.

The hayrack was packed full of boys and girls and as everybody knew everybody else, it was great fun. The boys were always pretending that they were going to push the girls off and though the girls weren't really frightened, they screamed at the top of their voices at every little poke. That is, all except Patsy. She was so used to climbing trees and fences and doing acrobatic stunts that she wasn't a bit scared when the boys tipped the side of the wobbly hayrack. "Where are we going?" asked Tag of his nearest neighbor, as he

By the time the boys and girls, and the teacher as well, had gotten untangled, they found that they had arrived at their destination and that the rack had stopped beside an old, tumbled-down mill which still had a stream of water trickling through it.

They all tumbled out and the boys raced up and down while the girls picked bouquets of wild flowers.

"Let's have a race to start off the picnic," called Miss Robertson, the teacher, as she gathered them together. "What shall it be?"

"A chariot race!" piped up Tag, who was so used to making suggestions for the Ritzie club that he was always ready with an idea.

"Our visitor has a fine suggestion," answered the teacher. "We will start with a chariot race. She divided the boys and girls into groups of five, as Tag explained the rules of the game.

"One person is the chariot driver, and he is pulled by four others who are the horses, two pulling dangled his feet over the side of the rack, trying to kick all the weeds as they went along. "Out to the old mill in Davey's woods," answered the boy. "There's a good swimmin' hole there, but the teacher said we couldn't go because we'd all have to stick together and play games."

"Isn't that the old, haunted mill?" asked Tag, who was always ready for anything exciting.

"Sure," answered the boy, "but there aren't any ghosts around in the daytime. I think that's why the teacher wants us to stay together, though."

Upon hearing such exciting news, Tag worked his way up to the front of the hayrack where his twin brother, Rag, and Marty were sitting beside the driver.

"Did you know that we are going to the old haunted mill?" he asked of Marty, his fellow Ritzie. "Sure," answered Marty, "but I don't think it's haunted any more. You don't ever hear anything about it."

Their whispered conversation was brought to an abrupt end as the hayrack, in an effort to cross a narrow creek that led to the main mill stream, rocked from side to side and hurled everybody into the center of the rack.

from each side. The driver of each chariot sets up a handkerchief in waggon fashion on the goal line. When the starting signal is given, the chariots race down the course and as the horses slow at the curving goal line, the driver picks up the handkerchief with his teeth without releasing the grip of either hand. The team wins that crosses the finish line with its team intact," explained Tag.

This sounded like a real race and everybody entered into it with spirit. One game followed another and it wasn't until late in the afternoon that Patsy came running up to her brother with this startling question, "Where are the twins?"

Marty though hard before he said, "Why, come to think of it, I haven't seen them since the finish of the chariot race." Grabbing his sister and Betty Ann by the hand, he started in search of the twins who had so mysteriously disappeared.

He didn't say a word about his conversation with Tag about the old mill being haunted to the girls and he tried not to think of it as he started the search for his fellow Ritzies.

Read in tomorrow's paper what happened to the twins!

YOUTHFUL ALASKAN AVIATOR PLANS SEARCH FOR GOLD OVER AIR ROUTE

C. F. CRAWFORD, YOUTHFUL ALASKAN AVIATOR, WHO WILL HEAD GOLD SEARCH BY PLANE THIS SUMMER.

WICHITA, Kan., June 24.—For the first time in history an airplane will be used this summer in a gold hunt. C. F. Crawford, youthful aviator of Fairbanks, Alaska, is now in Wichita supervising construction of a Swallow biplane to carry him and five other persons into an uninhabited part of Alaska. On August 1, they will leave Fairbanks in the ship to explore a basin in the Endicott mountain range between Kobak and Nootak rivers in north-eastern Alaska.

National geological survey parties explored the region in 1913 and maps made by them will be used by the six Alaskans in their hunt for gold. Oil and coal. As gold has been found in gravel at the mouth of the two rivers to be explored, the Alaskans feel that there is a concentrated deposit of gold in the district they expect to explore.

MASONIC BODIES TO ATTEND SERVICES

Following annual custom, Xenia and Greene County Masonic bodies will unite in celebration of St. John's Day, Sunday, by attending services at Christ Episcopal Church in a body Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Rev. C. O. Nybladh will preach.

Masons will first meet at the lodge rooms at 10 o'clock before proceeding to the church. All sons of Xenia and the county are invited to attend.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

GOOD COFFEE

Whatever the method employed, the coffee grounds should be in contact with the water the shortest possible time. Coffee should not be made in a metal container, but in a glass or earthenware one. It is modified by another to the effect that the difference in taste between infusions brewed in metallic and non-metallic containers is often so slight as to be unobtrusive.

The coffee grounds themselves should be kept fresh, carefully preserved in an air-tight can or container. The best coffee is bought in the bean and ground as needed at home. It should be ground according to the method by which it is to be prepared. For boiling, a coarse grind is acceptable. For percolation a little finer grind. For dripping the coffee should be pulverized. The proportions of coffee and water used vary according to the brand of coffee preferred by the family. Only experience will show the exact proportions required to produce a perfectly brewed cup of coffee. The general rule is six level tablespoons of coffee to a quart of water.

WOMAN ARRESTED

COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—A woman giving the name of Mrs. Evelyn Holshue, was held by police today, on a charge of deserting an infant, which was left on a doorstep here several days ago. The woman told police she was unable to buy milk for the child, but said a man with whom she was living was not her husband and was not the child's father.

The Theatre

An old saying has it that the best way to win the heart and hand of a man is through his stomach. The ancient prescription for love still works wonders, but what should a girl do when her favored beau takes his meals out?

Constance Talmadge, star of "Dejeuner de Soleil" now being filmed at the United Artists studios, looks with contempt on the time-worn adage and instead employs the green-eyed monster jealousy in a futile attempt to regain the affection of her lover.

"Dejeuner de Soleil" (Breakfast at Sunrise) is an amusing farce of sophisticated Paris and is being directed by Mal St. Clair, a master in interpreting that form of drama. One of the strongest supporting casts in months surrounds the star. In addition to Alvarado, the film has such noted players as Bryant Washburn, Marie Dressler, Alice White, Burr McIntosh, Nellie Bly Baker, Paulette Goddard, David Mir and "Tippy" Gray, co-composer of the dance sensation, "Valencia."

Paramount is still trying to catch up with a girl to play Lorelei in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Esther Ralston, Laura La Plante, Constance Talmadge and several hundred other actresses have been suggested during the search, but whether either Anita Loos, author of the book, or Jesse Lasky has decided on a girl for the part, no one yet knows. The suggested

Chester Conklin, W. C. Fields, Ford Sterling, Noah Beery, Belle Bennett, Mary Carr, Lon Chaney, Ernest Torrence, J. Farrell MacDonald and our old friend Francis X. Bushman.

It all has come about through the public's demand for bigger and better comedies and character pictures. And they are certainly being accommodated with some of the finest comedies ever made. Beery and Hatton, Conklin and George Bancroft, Conklin and W. C. Fields, are the central characters in some of the funniest pictures we've ever seen and more good ones are on the way.

My Son's Sweethearts

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:
Philip Wynne Tracy IV has had a childish engagement with Natalie Jones. Becoming interested in Lura Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's, he falls in love with her. Natalie overhearing him making love to Lura, breaks her engagement. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because America enters the World War.

Pat is one of the first to enlist. Just before leaving for France, Phil meets Natalie again, they plan to be married. The immediate departure of the troops, however, prevents this. Phil's regiment is sent to the front soon and he is wounded, winning the cross de guerre.

After the armistice Phil is awarded a scholarship in a French university and while in Paris he comes face to face with his mother, who has come to France to hunt him. Major Auckland, who is devoted to Anne Tracy, accompanies her.

In talking things over, Mrs. Tracy learns with dismay that Philip intends to marry a rich French divorcée with a four-year-old child. She refuses to give her consent to the marriage—until after Phil is twenty-one.

Phil compromises with his mother. If she will refuse Major Auckland's proposal of marriage, he will give up Pat for two years. Mrs. Tracy agrees and Phil goes to tell Pat. Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER I GOOD-BY, SWEETHEART, GOOD-BY

PHILIP WYNNE TRACY IV met Madam Pat just as she was going out of her apartment.

"You didn't expect me back so soon, did you dear?" he asked with a smile.

Pat's face had been very sad, but at sight of Philip's famous smile she told herself she had been worrying for nothing. That everything would be all right.

"Wynne, darling, you do love me, don't you? When you left me this morning I was sure you didn't love me any more, but now that you have come back to tell me you do, I am sorry for doubting you."

She stopped—her intuition told her that something was wrong.

"Where are you going, Pat—anywhere in particular? I have something very important to say to you. Let's go for a walk in the Bois."

Pat halted in the doorway, and instead of answering, she searched his face. Then she fell into step with her lover.

As he walked beside her, Philip Tracy looked at her carefully, not realizing that the moment a man begins to look at a woman critically, that moment may be sure his passion has begun to cool.

She was not beautiful. She was distinguished, always exquisitely dressed, and she had the free carriage of an American girl instead of the French woman. Just now, however, she had lost much of her vivacity and verve. She sensed, before Philip spoke, that the end had come.

She told herself that she had not thought that Philip could be so cruel as to come back to tell her they were to part this morning. For the thousandth time she asked herself why she had kept him at her apartment last night. She tried to excuse it by thinking that she had not wanted to send him back to the hotel when he had been drinking so much.

All at once she realized that he had not told her he loved her in answer to her fervent question, and the color dyed her face in great waves. She was ashamed. Slightly she pulled away from him and found that he was so preoccupied with his own thoughts that he did not notice.

THE two walked along for quite a way in silence, and then Pat said timidly, "I know what you would say to me, dear, but please don't talk about it now. When you meet me at the door, I was coming out here where I could think."

"Wynne, once I believed I was the happiest woman in the most miserable. For a long while it could never be—that I could never be your wife, and because each day and each hour I realized it more and more, I think I became insane. The time was the reason I asked you to come into my apartment last night. This morning when sanity came back to me I knew that I had lost you."

"As far as I am concerned, Wynne, this is the parting."

"Pat, Pat, why do you torment yourself? You are altogether mistaken. It would be foolish to try and tell you that my mother has not always objected to our marriage, but this afternoon when I got back to the hotel we came to a compromise."

"I am going home with her to America for two years. If then you want me, dear, I will come back to you."

"You won't come back. I shall always love you, but you won't come back."

An angry color flooded Phil's face. "Don't you believe me?" he asked.

"Yes, dear, I believe that you believe you will come now, but two years is an eternity to lovers, especially when the ocean divides them. Some Englishman has said that 'Ab-Some Englishman ever made such a declaration. He would know it was not true. Wynne, I know that I love you now, and I know that I love you, but how long we shall love each other, I cannot tell."

"Don't start away from me. I am not doubting you more than I am doubting myself. I cannot tell whether I shall love you next year or even next month. Dearest, it is better that neither of us should be fettered, and so I am going to say good-bye."

"But, Pat, you cannot turn me off like this, after what has been between us that I am giving you up. Until this morning I have been living in a beautiful dream. These past few months have been the happiest of my life. Today I know the dream can never come true. I am not sure that such dreams ever come true."

"My mother would never be reconciled to you as my husband—your mother would never be reconciled to me as your wife, and although families do not mean much when people are married and have time to remember and regret."

"But I will not marry your family, Pat. Phil remonstrated. "I will not marry mine. We will just marry each other."

"Yes, dear, we would both marry each other's family. A man and a woman may love each other singly, but when they marry they marry the whole of each other's family. Don't shake your head, Wynne, dear. Think back and you will see how many times the disgrace of one family has affected the other by marriage. I have been married, Wynne,

SPRINGFIELD, O., June 24.—General J. Warren Keifer, believed to be the oldest bank president in the world, is retiring from active duty at the age of ninety-one as head of the National Bank, after more than fifty-four years as president or vice-president of the institution. He becomes honorary president of the National Bank of Springfield, Ohio, as a result of a new merger recently announced. The new bank will have resources of $4,000,000.

General Keifer is the only surviving major general of the Civil war and aside from Frederick H. Gillett of Mass., is the only living speaker of the national house of representatives. He is still active and appears daily at the bank and his law offices with Keifer & Keifer.

General Keifer became president of the bank in 1873 but later assumed the vice presidency during the terms in congress where he held the speakership from 1881 to 1883. Upon return to civil life he again became president of the institution until his retirement June 18.

FORESTRY SERVICE BEGINS NEW SEARCH FOR FRENCH FLYERS

Indian Supposed To Have
Given Clue To Missing
Men

QUEBEC, June 24.—The forestry service today started on a new inquiry into a possible clue to the fate that befell Nungesser and Colli, the French trans-Atlantic flyers.

G. C. Piche, chief of the forestry services, received a telegram from a man named Tremblay, living at Bersimis, stating he had met an Indian who had given him "some interesting particulars about Nungesser and Colli," and that he would send a letter concerning all he had learned.

Forestry officials are making inquiries into the matter. Although all clues up to the present have failed to yield any actual indications of the fate of the two flyers, after a conference between Premier Taschereau and Minister of Lands and Forests Mercier, the government has decided to continue its searching.

Instructions have been issued to government agents to interview Indians on their way to the St. Lawrence to determine whether they have seen any signs of the flyers.

BRITAIN STICKS TO PROPOSALS LINDBERGH ASSUMES AIR CAREER

WILL NEITHER WITHDRAW NOR MODIFY PLAN

United States Not Favorable To Reducing Tonnage

GENEVA, June 24.—Great Britain has refused to withdraw, or at present modify, the proposals which it has made to the tri-partite naval disarmament conference here regarding the reduction of the size and life of capital ships, the International News Service learned today.

Hugh Gibson, chief American delegate, suggested to the Hon. W. C. Bridgeman, chief British delegate, that the proposals be withdrawn since they are not within the scope of the present conference, but Bridgeman declined to do so, and the American delegates a complete memorandum elaborating on the entire scheme of the British for reduction of capital ship construction programs.

"Great Britain always has been most desirous of obliging the United States and meeting President Coolidge's wishes in furthering his and the Washington government's disarmament desires," Bridgeman told Gibson. "Great Britain has been and still is working for limitation at least, if not reduction armaments."

"The British government has been of the opinion that any proposition to reduce or further limit capital ships was in furtherance of America's peace policy."

Bridgeman even went so far as to threaten to demand a plenary session of the conference next Tuesday in order to force Gibson to state fully and publicly the American position as regards capital ships.

British spokesmen have made no effort to hide their annoyance at the manner in which their proposals have been received by both the United States and Japan and they declare that the United States delegates are introducing minor matters and are uttering sentiments "as thin as air."

In particular the British are offended that the United States has brought up the question of the large British marine and the question of this merchant marine being readily adaptable to fighting purposes in time of war.

Bridgeman advised Gibson that Great Britain was willing to discuss the possibilities of its merchant marine being converted into war vessels, but he said he considered such discussion useless since in case of war all liner and other ship would be armed for defense and every other purpose.

When Bridgeman's refusal to withdraw the capital ship proposals had been received by the American delegation, Gibson informed the British lord of the admiralty that the United States is not desirous of reducing the maximum tonnage of destroyers below 3,000 tons.

FOREIGN TROOPS CLASH IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, June 24.—Landing troops from foreign warships and nationalists have clashed at Chin-kiang, according to dispatches received here.

Nationalists numbering fifty, under a Chinese officer, raided the Japanese Matheson hulk at Chin-kiang on Thursday and fired upon a party from the warships which came to drive them away.

The three brothers confessed in Jacksonville, Ore., late yesterday that they had killed four members of the crew of a gold-laden train during an attempted holdup in the Skisliou mountains. The confessions ended a four-year campaign by postal inspectors to bring the bandits to justice. Nearly a million dollars was spent in the search.

The confessions of the three brothers followed Hughes' conviction of the murder of Charles Johnson, brakeman of the railroad train. When the jury recommended life imprisonment, Hughes made a clean breast of his part in the crime. The confessions of Roy and Ray, immediately afterward, filled in details of the savage deed.

CLEVELAND, June 24.—The Texas "Good Will" delegation headed by Governor Dan Moody, was to arrive here this morning for a day's visit. Governor Moody was scheduled to speak during a noon-day luncheon at the chamber of commerce, following an informal dinner tonight, the party was to attend the German Saengerfest, then leave for Chicago.

OHIO BOY SPELLS WAY TO TITLE

He won the Ohio championship and then came to Washington to defeat thirteen other state champions in the finals of a national tournament. Dean won his crown on the word "abrogate," which Ralph Keenan, 13, of Waukon, Ia., spelled "abregate." A thousand dollars went to the winner, and $500 to the runner-up with smaller cash prizes for other contestants.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Senator Wesley L. Jones, of Washington, chief Republican whip of the senate, thinks President Coolidge ought to call the upper house of congress in special session for exclusive consideration of the Vard and Smith cases. Senator Jones, who has just left the capital by automobile for a 4,000 mile drive to Seattle, believes that the senate calendar might well be cleared of the Pennsylvania and Illinois "slush fund" contests and the way thus paved for the immense legislative program the Seventieth congress has before it. Under Section three of Article II of the Constitution, the president has authority to "con-

ADVENTURER DIES ON MURDER CHARGE

CHICAGO, June 24.—Elin Lyons, Colombian soldier of fortune, was hanged in the county jail today for the murder of Julian Bonfield, police officer, killed during a holdup.

The youthful South American adventurer went to his death calmly. He maintained his innocence to the last, claiming Policeman Bonfield shot himself accidentally.

Twice saved by last minute writs, hope for a third stay was dispelled last night when a delegation, headed by Dr. Albert G. Benavides, Colombian consul to Chicago, failed to obtain executive clemency from Governor Small.

D'AUTREMONT BOYS SENTENCED AFTER CONFESSING MURDERS

SALEM, Ore., June 24.—Atoning for one of the most widely advertised crimes in American history, three young brothers, Roy, Ray and Hugh D'Autremont, started life sentences in the Oregon Penitentiary today.

The three brothers confessed in Jacksonville, Ore., late yesterday that they had killed four members of the crew of a gold-laden train during an attempted holdup in the Skisliou mountains. The confessions ended a four-year campaign by postal inspectors to bring the bandits to justice. Nearly a million dollars was spent in the search.

The confessions of the three brothers followed Hughes' conviction of the murder of Charles Johnson, brakeman of the railroad train. When the jury recommended life imprisonment, Hughes made a clean breast of his part in the crime. The confessions of Roy and Ray, immediately afterward, filled in details of the savage deed.

WHAT PRICE FILM FAME? STUDIOS CUT WAGES

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 24.—What price film fame was a moot question along movie row today as screen stars and those who are up and coming in the cinema profession registered real anxiety over the new economy wave which has hit the studios.

DROPS BOYISHNESS TO BECOME SERIOUS BUSINESS OFFICER

Once Carefree Flyer Now
Involved In Conference

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Dropping his boyishness as one slips out of an old garment, Charles A. Lindbergh, "the flying kid," today assumed the role of a man of large affairs. He has a career—commercial aviation—and the old carefree flying days, the youthful abandon, and the wild celebrations that marked his flight to Paris are all behind him.

The smiling, daring youth who became the world's hero by virtue of his happy abandon now moves from conference to conference, an important factor in national projects, a companion of serious minded men who want to have his life insured.

Only six weeks ago life was an endless gay round of flying; today there is the conference with the secretary of state about a trip to Canada, a visit to the office of the postmaster general to discuss his future status in the air mail service, a meeting with the Canadian minister to the United States, and finally a conference in a de luxe hotel suite with New York interests eager to enlist a new member for a board of directors.

As little as a week ago, "Lindy" was still riding the streets of the land, greeting riotous multitudes who acclaimed him for an epochal achievement of youth. Yesterday Colonel Lindbergh steamed down the Potomac for three hours aboard the official yacht of the secretary of the navy, accompanied by his St. Louis backers and a dozen government officials, with whom he discussed his future plans in a solitude worthy of a cabinet meeting. A week ago he came and went at will flying now at night and again by day, now in this plane and now in that.

Today he has an engagement calendar, like a railroad president and cannot tell you even when he is going to fly to New York, which he hopes somehow to achieve today or tomorrow.

Last night he dined at the home of Hanford McNider, assistant secretary of war, surrounded by high officials representing four departments of the government, and then slept in the home of the secretary of commerce—where everything is arranged for the accommodation of serious discussion.

Aside from the fact that Colonel Lindbergh is now a "career man" in commercial aviation, the first series of conferences here settled nothing. There are hundreds of propositions to be considered before a decision is made, and these are matters for conference.

Meanwhile the little silvered monoplane, "The Spirit of St. Louis," whose descent from the blackness over Le Bourget electrified the world, sits riderless in the hangar in St. Louis, waiting again the magic touch of the young man who has "arrived."

Today more conferences were scheduled. Lindy hopes to get away for New York late today or tomorrow, but his plans were not definite this morning. It depends upon the conferences.

MAYOR INDICTED

CLEVELAND, O., June 24.—Facing trial on an indictment charging him with embezzlement of over $1,000 in state and village funds, Mayor J. C. Tegg, of Euclid Heights, Cleveland suburb, was to be arraigned before Common Pleas Judge Walter McMahon today. The indictment followed a recent investigation by state examiners.

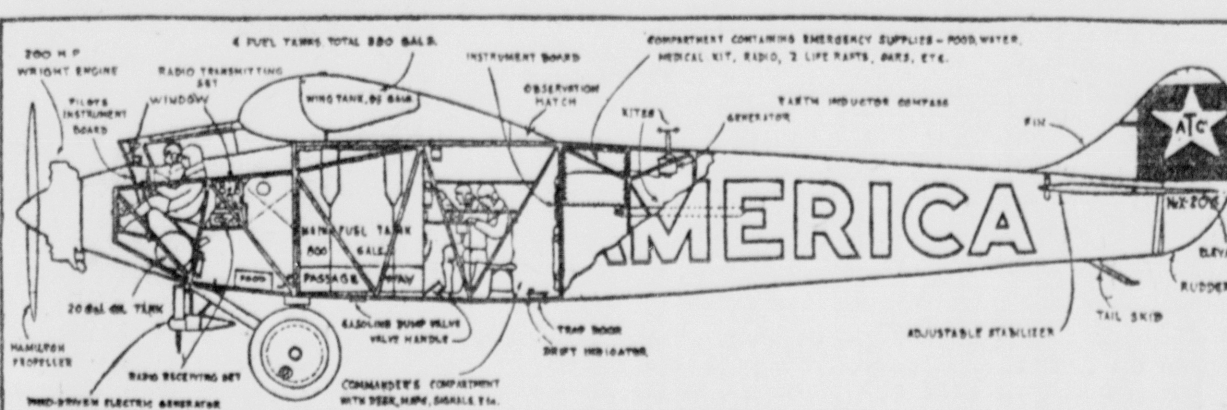

When Jesse Lasky, vice-president of Paramount-Famous Players-Lasky corporation, announced that all employees would be asked to accept salary reductions ranging from ten per cent and up, with proportionately larger cuts for stars, directors and high salaried technicians and experts.

While none of the stars whose salaries run in four figures would be affected by the cuts, all who might be affected looked to their contracts and were content that their papers had not yet expired.

"Haven't heard a word about it," was the calm reply of one grim visaged actor whose screen villainy nets him $2,000 a week. "Anyway, my contract has another year to run."

HOW BYRD TRANSOCEAN PLANE LOOKS INSIDE

This drawing reveals the interior arrangements of the giant plane with which Commander Richard E. Byrd hopes to prove a commercial trans-Atlantic airplane practical. Bert Acosta, pilot, and George Noville, navigator and radio operator, have positions in the front cabin; while further back, in the observation hatch, are the stations of Commander Byrd and Bernt Balchen, observer. It is from this observation hatch that will emanate the data on storms, winds, etc., eagerly sought by science. Sketch prepared by Aero Digest (New York).

OMAHA SNIPER CALMLY ACCEPTS DEATH IN CHAIR FOR PENALTY

Frank Carter Admits Forty Three Murders—Began Killings In 1895—Convicted For Shooting Omaha Man.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 24.—Appearing without nerves, Frank Carter, the "Omaha sniper" who stalked his victims at night, went to his death in the electric chair at state prison here at 6:18 o'clock this morning. He was declared dead six minutes later.

Before going to the chair, Carter told reporters he had killed forty-three people in his life. He included in this list the unsolved Villisca, Iowa, ax murders of more than fifteen years ago, when an entire family was wiped out. Prison officials, however, scouted his story.

Carter, who from the first contended he was ready to die and who laughed at the efforts of his attorneys to secure a stay of execution, showed he was ready this morning. He walked from "death row" to the execution room and chatted with the officials there and he was strapped in the chair.

He was executed for the murders of William McDevitt and Dr. Austin Searles, both of Omaha. He shot them with a small bore rifle, equipped with silencer. Among those who saw Carter die was Ralph Johnson of Council Bluffs, who was shot by Carter a day or two after he killed the two Omaha men. Johnson walked beside Carter when he left his cell, and assisted in placing him in the chair.

FREDERICK'S FATE GIVEN JURY FRIDAY AFTER DEATH TRIAL

Insanity Plea May Save
Life Of Butcher's
Slayer

CLEVELAND, June 24.—The fate of Ernest Frederick, former Warren Ohio Steel Company employee, charged with the murder of Walter Holcomb, Warren butcher, last February 28, was to be placed in the hands of the jury here today. If found guilty of first degree murder, Frederick must hang, as Holcomb was shot to death on government property—in the Warren postoffice—and federal law decides such a penalty.

If the accused man is released on the insanity plea which his attorneys have made for him, he faces incarceration in an asylum. A warrant is now in the hands of a deputy U. S. marshal here, following the filing of an insanity petition in Warren Probate Court, and will be served if Frederick is freed of the murder charge.

Holcomb was killed when Frederick, returning to Warren, after an absence of two weeks, was informed that the former had been paying attentions to his wife. Allentists for government and defense have disagreed on the defendant's sanity.

CORONER RETURNS VERDICT OF SUICIDE IN ADSHEAD DEATH

George Frederick Adshead, 22, Stockport, Eng., special Antioch College student, committed suicide May 27 by drowning in the Little Miami River.

This was the verdict rendered Friday morning by Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, coroner, just four weeks after the youth disappeared. The verdict followed an inquest held June 15 at which evidence indicated that Adshead had carried out threats of self-destruction indicated in a note left when he disappeared. His body was found by fishermen June 5.

The verdict supports the theory maintained by this newspaper from the first. This newspaper declared the death was a suicide when the body was discovered and phoned several times that this would be the verdict of the coroner, in spite of sensationalized accounts printed in other papers hinting

GENERAL WOOD BACK FROM PHILIPPINES BROKEN IN HEALTH

Friends Believe He Can not Return To Island
Duties

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 24.—A very sick man arose at the summer White House this morning to contemplate the glories of the Black Hills and to wonder whether the condition of his health was ever again going to permit him to return to the important office he holds.

The man was Major General Leonard Wood, one time candidate for the presidency and Governor General of the Philippines for the past six years. He is back home for his first vacation in that time, but he has returned broken in body from two accidents and a serious operation to the point he can scarcely go about.

The general has said he will go back to the Philippines. Major B. Y. Read, his aide, has stated positively since the arrival of the party here that the return voyage would be made in September. But those who have seen General Wood at the state game lodge where he and Mrs. Wood have been over night guests of President and Mrs. Coolidge, are of the opinion that the flesh is weaker than the spirit.

"He is shot," tersely remarked one person well qualified to know whereof he speaks. There is a marked similarity in appearance between General Wood in his present condition and Woodrow Wilson following the breakdown which confined the latter to a sick bed for the last year and a half of his service as president, as was the case with Wilson, General Wood has to be lifted in and out of a motor car, eased into a chair, and stoutly assisted when he attempts to walk. He is suffering from injuries to his left leg and arms sustained in an automobile accident a month ago, and from two injured ribs acquired on the boat coming to the United States. To all appearances he is suffering from a muscular paralysis affecting the whole left side, although members of his party insist that he has not had a stroke.

Some indications of the general's plans for the future are to be made today. President Coolidge has promised to let the newspapermen know when his guest will receive them—providing he is up to it physically.

Food supplies were then brought to the plane. Tony Argan, Hempstead restaurant who supplied the Chamberlin-Levine expedition, came rushing across the field in a car with two roast chickens, ten cheese and turkey sandwiches, three quarts of coffee and two quarts of tea.

Without warning, at 9:45 p. m. a gale blew up over the field, followed almost immediately by a drenching rain. The crowd scurried for cover.

For a few minutes they seemed to be a possibility that the plane would be blown over. To prevent such a disaster, the plane was lashed by ropes to Kinkade's car. Kinkade started his automobile and pulled in the opposite direction from his wind was blowing. This kept the plane upright until the storm blew over.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the plane was pulled up the incline by a tractor.

Then, shortly after midnight, the telephone in the hangar rang. A newspaperman answered it. "This is Byrd," said the voice on the wire. "The hop-off has been postponed. Yes, the same old reason, a storm—this time over Newfoundland."

BODY IS FOUND

NILES, O., June 24.—The body of John Shorthouse, 74, retired steel worker, missing since Monday, was found floating in a hot water exhaust eddy in the Mahoning river.

MACHINE POISED TO FLY WHEN OBSERVER FINDS WEATHER BAD

Commander And Crew
Disappointed By Last
Minute Warning

ROOSEVELT FIELD, MINN., June 24.—Perched proudly on an incline leading to a long runway here today is the giant silver-bodied, gold-winged monoplane, America, ready to wing its way toward Paris at a moment's notice.

It was to have flown at dawn this morning, but at the eleventh hour, after final preparations had been made, the hop-off was postponed indefinitely because a storm suddenly burst over the coast of Newfoundland.

Commander Richard E. Byrd and the three men who will make the flight with him were deeply disappointed, and so were several thousand persons who swarmed over Roosevelt Field eager to witness the start of the epochal expedition.

"I thought sure we were going this time," said Byrd, who is "fretting" over the repeated delays. "I hope it won't be long before we do go. And we'll go the moment the weatherman gives us the word that conditions are right."

But the weather man who is advising Byrd does not think the American can take off today. He is James Kimball, United States Weather Bureau meteorologist. It was Kimball's report shortly after midnight that prompted Byrd to delay the hop-off.

"They certainly will not be able to go today, and Saturday is too far away to make a prediction," was the pessimistic comment of Kimball.

As last minute preparations for the take-off were being made amid great excitement at the flying field, Kimball telephoned the report to Byrd.

It was a night of excitement at the hangar. Throughout the evening automobile came in droves with persons eager to see the take-off. Several thousand people swarmed over the field as the America was edged quarter of a mile to the wheeled from its hangar and taxied, incline, giving rise to the belief that the long-awaited hop-off was imminent.

Commander Byrd, after a final conference with Anthony Fokker, designer of the plane, had departed for the Garden City Hotel to get a few hours sleep before getting away on the trans-Atlantic flight, and all around the hangar there was a tenseness that has not hitherto prevailed.

Fifty-eight uniformed policemen stood guard near the hangar, keeping the crowd beyond roped off spaces. The spectators, however, were orderly.

Precisely at 8:10 p. m. the America was wheeled along a narrow railway in the hangar to a position directly in front of the hangar where it was jacked up and weighed. The beam tipped at close to 14,500 pounds.

The procedure was supervised by Bert Acosta, who will pilot the plane. He was assisted by T. Harold Kinkade, expert on motors who previously had put his O. K. on the three motors of the America.

Then, with policemen forming a semi-circle about it, the black nose of the plane was turned south in the direction of the incline from which the take-off was to be made. Acosta climbed into the cockpit and the plane was taxied across the field under its own power. It moved slowly in the dusk of the dawnning night and was followed by about 1,000 men, women and children. The plane stopped in front of a fifty-foot dirt incline. Ropes were stretched for a hundred yards on both sides of the incline to keep the crowd back.

Food supplies were then brought to the plane. Tony Argan, Hempstead restaurant who supplied the Chamberlin-Levine expedition, came rushing across the field in a car with two roast chickens, ten cheese and turkey sandwiches, three quarts of coffee and two quarts of tea.

Without warning, at 9:45 p. m. a gale blew up over the field, followed almost immediately by a drenching rain. The crowd scurried for cover.

For a few minutes they seemed to be a possibility that the plane would be blown over. To prevent such a disaster, the plane was lashed by ropes to Kinkade's car. Kinkade started his automobile and pulled in the opposite direction from his wind was blowing. This kept the plane upright until the storm blew over.

ANTIOCH ELECTS CAPTAINS OF TEAMS

Herman Swonger, Dayton, O., was re-elected president, and Rebecca Downing, Concord, Mass., secretary, of the Antioch Pioneer Society at the annual meeting and reunion of the organization at the home of Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College, in Yellow Springs Wednesday night.

Forty students, who were among the first to take the course of instruction under the new plan formulated by President Morgan in 1921, attended the meeting, which was spent in a social way.

The society meets once every year and is expected to become a permanent institution, keeping alive the memories of college days and renewing old acquaintances.

A number of letters were received and read at the meeting from early students, who were unable to be present.

The Junior Prom will be held Thursday night at 9 o'clock at Kelley Hall and many activities are scheduled for Friday, preceding commencement exercises Saturday.

A picnic will be enjoyed in Antioch Glen Friday from 11:30 to 1 o'clock, and the president's reception will take place between 3 and 5 p. m. The alumni business meeting is scheduled for between 5 and 6 p. m., followed by the alumni banquet between 6 and 9 p. m., after which the senior class play, "Horace Mann," will be given on the college steps.

All the activities will be held out-of-doors, weather permitting.

The Theatre

By Fleet Smith

NEW YORK, June 23.—It is curious to note what tremendous popularity has been attained by the college story in the films. Bebe Daniels started the whole thing with "The Campus Flirt," it was carried along by the five Paramount Junior Stars in "Rolled Stocking," and now Bebe is going to do it again in "Swim, Girl, Swim."

An interesting feature is that of course, in the news reels, and the pictures and the stories, in addition to being extraordinary popular among audiences throughout the country, are very well done, offering unusually good photography and continuity, with sensible plots and good directing.

Strong support for the stars is being provided by Paramount in these college pictures, too, the firm going so far for Miss Daniels as to put Miss Gertrude Ederle, the swimmer of the English Channel, under contract to support Miss Daniels in "Swim, Girl, Swim."

This is the first time Miss Ederle has been in the movies, except simple, stories of everyday folks, depicted in simple, effective and dramatic style. An unusual example of this type of picture, which has long been a crying need in the pictures, is Jannings' new picture, "The Way of All Flesh," which he has just finished. It is the first American-made film of Jannings and contains a number of powerful dramatic moments. It is simply a story of a middle west banker of German descent, whose lifetime record of honesty and domesticity is shattered through the work of a gold-digger.

A simple little story, told and acted well, and it contains more punch than a number of the smashing big pictures put together.

The "heroes of the day" are having their flare, all right. Paramount has signed Gertrude Ederle, and everyone in the motion picture business has tried to get Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to sign a movie contract. The latest word along "movie row" is that Lindbergh will sign no movie contracts now or later. Paramount with Ham, Mr. and Mrs. Hammie Bland and son, Glen, Mr. Edwin Klontz on its way, is planning another air picture. It is by John Monk Saunders and is to be called "The Legion of the Condemned." Invitations have been extended to Col. Lindbergh to come to New York from wherever he is at the moment to see the premiere of "Wings." The picture is to run at the Criterion theater in New York and the opening is set for August 1.

ROSS TOWNSHIP

A birthday dinner was given at the Ross school grounds last Sunday in honor of Mrs. Wm. Stitts-worth and son, Earl, and nephew, Mr. Glen Bland, all birthdays being about the same time. The table was decorated with three large birthday cakes besides many other good eats. Those present were: Mr. Florence Klontz and family, Mr. Walter Smith and family, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewitt, Mr. Isaac Roush of South Charleston, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Johnson and niece, Mary Jane Roush, of Sedalia, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Neal of Fort William, and Mr. and Mrs. Hammie Bland and son, Glen, Mr. Edwin Klontz and family, Miss Mae Stitts-worth of Jamestown, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Donnelly of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Klontz, Mr. Grover Miller and wife, Mrs. Wm. Sheely and son, George, and Mr. Wm. Stitts-worth and family of near here.

Mr. Baxter Conner who is a patient at a Columbus hospital is slowly improving.

Many children in this vicinity are ill with whooping cough.

Roberta and Walter Beekman, children of Mr. Otis Beekman have gone to Leesburg to spend the summer with relatives.

Miss Alice Richey of Osborn visited her grandmother, Mrs. M. Matthew last week.

Several friends and relatives attended the funeral of Theodore Lever at Goshen last week.

The Ladies Aid of Grape Grove will meet at the home of Mrs. Charles Rittenour the first Thursday in July.

Oil Stove cooks merrily
away while you do other things

Put your roast or cake into the Perfection Oven, your vegetables on to boil. Set the flames high or low, to suit your cooking needs. They will not "creep up." You can trust them to remain as you set them, while you work in the garden, finish a dress, or do other things.

When you touch a match to the wick, cooking begins. A solid column of clean heat is driven full force right to the cooking.

Intense heat covers the entire cooking surface of the utensils. That's why food is always so thoroughly cooked on the Perfection Stove—and not just in spots.

The modern Perfection Oil Stoves have many improvements which put them far ahead of any other oil stoves in cooking satisfaction, beauty, and convenience. Only in the newest Perfections will you find the attractive new gray color harmony and porcelain enamel tops.

Back of these newest Perfections stands the satisfaction of more than 4,500,000 Perfection owners.

Mrs. DeGraf Says—

XENIA MUSICIAN'S PERFORMANCE PRAISED

The technique of Miss Juanita Rankin, Xenia pianist, who played the dedicatory program on the Knabe grand piano, a part of the dedicatory program at the Greene St. Methodist Church, Xenia, O., Monday night, was appreciated by the throng of people who attended the recital.

A Piqua music critic had the following to say of Miss Rankin's part of the program: "Miss Rankin is a musician worthy of her recommendation" and "the came up to every expectation that could possibly be entertained. Miss Rankin has a precision of touch and fullness of tone that is marvelous and her program, which she played without music, fully satisfied the most critical of her audiences."

"Miss Rankin played three numbers that included 'The Lark,' by Balakirev, 'Fantasy in F Minor' by Chopin and 'Barcarolle in A Minor,' by Rubenstein.

"As a finale to this marvelous performance, Benjamin C. DeCamp, Cincinnati and Miss Rankin played 'Rarfa,' 'Cavatina' as a duet with the organ and piano. It is extremely interesting to know that these musicians had only played this duet together but once, as they had only met one another Monday afternoon, and with but a single rehearsal, they played this difficult composition with utter perfection."

AUTHORITIES SEEK XENIAN WANTED FOR HOSPITAL ESCAPE

Once more authorities of two counties are searching for Noble Nooks, colored, Xenia, who escaped from a Hillsboro hospital last Saturday, immediately following a minor operation.

He had been removed to the hospital from the Hillsboro jail last week and escaped by crawling through a window.

Nooks had been confined in the jail since April, having been sentenced on a liquor charge.

Several Xenians are reported to have visited Nooks at the hospital and it is thought they may have assisted him to escape.

Nooks was arrested more than a month ago by Xenia police for Hillsboro authorities, from whom he had escaped some time earlier.

RE-ARRESTED

William Finley, 37, Beaver Creek Twp., escaped prosecution in Probate Court on a charge of assault upon his wife when the action was Finley was placed in the Fayette County Jail but later released under bond pending a hearing of the charge.

VIENNA, June 23.—Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine were forced to abandon their plans to fly to Prague today, because of heavy fog.

INSPECTS OLD PLANE
DAYTON, O., June 23.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, during his overnight visit at the home of Orville Wright, co-inventor of the airplane, here, inspected the original Wright brothers biplane, in which the first successful American flight of a heavier-than-air machine was made.

The historic plane, boxed, is stored in the home of Orville Wright, the survivor of its two inventors. The machine has been the subject of a long-drawn-out controversy between Wright and the Smithsonian Institute, at Washington, which has on exhibition the original Langley plane, which was placed as the first American ship. Wright disputed this label, and at one time during the controversy, made arrangements to present the Wright plane to the British museum, but later abandoned this plan.

BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD'S GENEROSITY—O God, let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God shall bless us. And all the ends of the earth shall fear him. Psalm 67:5, 7.

DANGER IN WRITING

A woman, filling in answer to her husband's suit for divorce, quoted from a book he had written. To her the philosophy expressed in the book was intolerable. It spoke for independence and freedom for the wife as well as for the husband, and emphatically argued against writing letters. For the wife the book was proof that her husband personally entertained every belief expressed in his book.

How much of an author's private conviction crops out in his fiction it is difficult to say. The public, and critics as well, are certain to form pictures in their minds of authors from their works. The reader finds a novel delicate, charming, brightly written, and imagines the novelist possessed of the same qualities. But often he finds he is a 200-pound, bewiskered individual.

If the words uttered by characters in a book are to be thrown in the teeth of their author, so that he is caught up by them and compelled to pay alimony, novelists will have to guard their speech, write anonymously or remain celibates. They should consider the advice to letter-writers: "Do right, and fear no man; don't write and fear no woman."

The only proof the wife had that her husband's writings reflected his opinions seems to have been that he practiced, toward her, his preaching against letter writing. But neither book nor wife divulged whether the author disapproved of writing letters because he thought it indiscreet, wasteful or merely unnecessary. By now he, no doubt, is convinced that writing books is as dangerous as writing letters.

THE CURSE OF CONTENTMENT

The most vital thing in civilization is that "man never is, but always to be blest."

Whenever any man, this nation or this world considers itself as greatly blessed as it is necessary to be, it will be time for Gabriel to sound a loud, clear call. It is our belief that tomorrow we shall be in better circumstances, "tomorrow we shall have achieved wider fame, tomorrow we shall have greater vigor that prevents our degenerating to the lowly simian. If you believe in simian ancestry, or to the state of Adam and Eve if you don't."

Contentment means the life of the snail which has gone unchanged through a few million years or so while other animal life was changing all about it.

No progress is possible when we are contented with ourselves and with our surroundings.

The Way of the World

THE BEST REQUEST

A man in an eastern city died not long ago, leaving an estate of nearly $5,000,000. His bequests were not unusual. The disposition of his money was not unusual. But he wrote a paragraph to his children in his will which contains more sound sense and is more important to those who will read it and think about it than the mere details of how and where he left his money. He said:

"Be frugal and generous, charitable according to your means. Always love, respect and assist one another. Remember your best friend is your purse, and when that is empty friendship is but a name. As a result of my knowledge I solemnly urge that your mother is the heartening of the family. Continue to cherish and love her. She shares your every joy and sorrow."

SHOW YOUR IGNORANCE

To question a wise man is the beginning of wisdom. Many of us are too timid to ask questions. We are afraid that our question will show that we are ignorant. We pass by opportunities to learn, we pass by things we ought to know about and that we could easily find out about because we lack the nerve to ask questions. Most successful people are questioners and listeners. The man who is willing to risk getting a reputation for ignorance in some things by asking questions is the man who makes himself an expert.

MAKE FAILURES PAY

Philip D. Armour, who made Armour & Co., walked all the way to California in the early days. He wanted to find gold. The four men took him six months. When he got there he didn't find gold. All he found was a job digging for those who had got there first. That was a bitter disappointment for Armour. He came back to Chicago and founded a great fortune. Did you ever have a bitter disappointment? What did you do then? Are you disappointed now in something that didn't go over? What are you doing? Are you quitting or are you going on?

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

By Marjorie K. Rawlings

SPORTSMEN'S WIVES

THE golfer's wife, poor thing, poor thing,
Puts up with almost everything.
Her meals are scorched, warmed-over, late,
And served to language profligate.

The motorist's wife, poor hurried thing,
Spends all the summer on the wing.
She counts that moment sweet and blest
When punctured tires enforce a rest.

The sailor's wife lives all alone,
And picks a solitary bone.
She would embrace the chance, poor thing,
To put up with 'most anything!

Dropping The Pilot

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C KELLY

BEING RESOURCEFUL

In the editorial office of a big newspaper, one morning about 2:20 o'clock, or about ten minutes before press time, the managing editor and a young reporter sat talking about nothing in particular. They were enjoying the relaxation that comes with the knowledge that the day's work is about over. Suddenly the foreman of the pressroom came rushing in, greatly excited, to tell of grave difficulties down below.

"That water main out in the street had burst," said he, "and can't possibly be repaired for several hours. And there's not enough water in our boilers to run the engine for the presses. How are we going to get any water? Goodness knows, I don't. And he made a despairing gesture."

It was, indeed, a serious situation. Even a few minutes' delay in going to press would mean that the earlier editions of the paper would miss their trails and that thousands of subscribers would not have their paper at the breakfast table. A longer delay would be even worse.

"Well, I'm at the end of my string," added the pressroom foreman. "Maybe you can think of something to do. I'll have to be done quickly."

The young reporter was awestricken over the responsibility that had been placed on his boss. He had been handed the burden of doing the impossible, and, moreover, he must do it instantly. The only person who took the whole thing calmly was the managing editor.

Whistling softly to himself, with apparent unconcern, he turned about in his swivel chair to the telephone, and called a number. Having got his number, he asked for a man he knew.

Briefly he told this man what had happened, and asked:

"Couldn't you give us a line of hose long enough to reach up the street to some other main, so we can get our presses started? We'll appreciate the favor."

The man at the other end said he would, and the conversation ended.

The boss had simply called up a friend at the fire department. In a few minutes the rattle of a hose wagon could be heard outside, and the problem was solved.

The young reporter was breathless with admiration over such resourcefulness, but the managing editor had not the slightest idea that he had done anything unusual. To him it was simply one of many items in his day's work.

Calling for application of common sense. That was all it was—just doing the simple, obvious thing, that anybody might have thought of. Resourcefulness is often just elemental gumption.

the road and don't throw your money on shysters, of whatever breed or variety."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

W. McC.: Please give me some information in regard to acne indurata. Have been treated unsuccessfully with sulphur, ichthyol, etc., and would appreciate any suggestions you might give concerning systematic treatment.

Answer.—The less you interfere with acne, especially acne indurata, the better as a rule. It is a self-limited disease, sure to disappear in time, though it may take years. Have patience, take daily warm baths and castor oil every night before retiring. Some have had success with serums and vaccines, especially autogenous vaccines, but none of them are infallible.

The people who practice this form of pseudo-medicine are known as "practical psychologists" and "character analysts," and I suppose they are offshoots from psycho-analysis which, when practiced by one who is really informed and who understands his business, may be, and I believe often is, very helpful.

These practical psychologists referred to, are properly called dangerous, because they appeal to the weak points in the nature of those who consult them, subordinate desire for money, ambition for social prominence, eagerness for success in politics, in fact, they forcibly suggest the story of the conference of Saul with the witch of Endor.

This is to all intents and purposes a phase of the gambling predilection, a desire to get something for nothing, a feeling that there is an easy way to get what you want if you can only get the right kind of a tip.

Few gamblers succeed permanently, the majority of people find it necessary to get whatever they may acquire by hard work and not infrequently with the interposition of hard knocks.

The article in question believes that these practitioners are an injury to the mental hygiene movement which is gaining more and more ground, and upon communities throughout the world. They certainly are.

The lectures and conferences in which they appear are full of high-sounding phrases, full of foolish promises and entirely calculated to dupe and deceive the unwary, the lazy and the disappointed. Naturally enough they denounce the regular medical profession, the educated psychologists and try to make their victims think that those who have acquired solid information by hard work are humbugs, and that they, the short-cuts and the get-rich-quick are the real thing.

Well, old P. T. Barnum was not very far out of the way when he insisted that the American people loved to be humbugged.

If they do not enjoy the sensation they certainly show them selves very easy victims.

How to Achieve Beauty by MME. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

KEEPING A WELL-GROOMED LOOK THROUGHOUT A SUMMER DAY

To retain a well-groomed look in summer requires considerably more effort than at any other time of the year. During the spring, fall and winter days, if one starts out with the proper kind of a foundation in the morning, except for an occasional freshening up during the day, not much additional self-care is necessary.

But in the sweltering days which we will be subjected to during the next two months, one must continually be giving thought to both appearance and feeling of comfort, if she would not look fairly disheveled by the time evening arrives.

This is especially evident with the business woman. The woman in the home usually has more time to devote to self-care, and her activities are not so strenuous as those of the business woman. The latter is constantly on the go, mentally and physically, and gets little time to think of herself from the minute she leaves the house in the morning until she returns at night, outside of perhaps powdering her nose once or twice during the day.

Therefore, the make-up with which she starts out in the morning must be applied carefully so as to withstand the countering with which she comes in contact during the hours away from home. The daily bath is of prime importance, and during the summer months I advocate the tepid bath at night for immaculate cleanliness and a cold shower in the morning for stimulation of circulation.

After the bath the next important step is to properly prepare the face for the make-up of the day. Considerable attention should be given to this part of your toilette, because much of the freshness of your appearance throughout the warm hours depends on how carefully you prepare your face in the morning. To avoid a flushed, shiny face and retain a rose petal complexion throughout the day, there are several excellent foundation creams and balms which prevent the appearance of an undesirable shiny nose and make one's cosmetics doubly adherent.

Aside from this many women prefer to use one of the summer washes which are so efficacious in overcoming excessive oiliness and shine and in preventing the over-flushing of the skin as well as excessive perspiration.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, June 24. — Little ironies of New York life: THE FEMINIST

George and Jane were graduated from the same co-educational university in the high tide of the feminist movement. George, who has always been anxious to seem first, minded, modern in ideas, and liberal in thought, conceded to Jane without a struggle that women were the mental equals of men and that women should be given full right to economic independence.

After his graduation George entered a law office and presently his intelligence and diligence was rewarded in an income sufficient for him and Jane to marry. Before he proposed, he had had many talks with Jane on the subject of marriage and they had agreed that the satisfactory conclusion to it should be an arrangement where the wife would not be dependent upon her husband for whatever money she needed.

Jane had a job on a radical magazine where she got $25 a week. True, she lived with her parents, but she had her own checkbook out of her salary and even when she lunched with George she insisted upon paying her part of the check. They were married and after a time Jane had to resign her position on the magazine temporarily while she gave birth to a child. When she was strong again, she employed a nurse at $20 a week to take care of the child, and retained her general housekeeper who also did the cooking at $22 a week.

Jane found that after a day in the office she could not bear the discomforts of the subway, even the bus and got into the habit of taking a taxi home each night. That meant $7.50 a week. Her lunch money came to about $10 a week, and often she called up her husband and suggested that they dine in town.

In five it cost her husband about $50 a week for Jane to keep a $25 a week job.

A New York novelist, married and the father of a child, fell in love with another woman, a free which his wife discovered, and some time after the discovery, she divorced him when she was unable to win her husband back.

The novelist wrote two realistic novels describing this drama. His novels of course, were presentations of the case from his point of view. Later the other woman wrote a novel presenting the domestic drama as she saw it. And now the wife has written a novel presenting the case from her point of view.

The public has now had ample opportunity to satiate its curiosity about the novelist's private life.

On the day that Colonel Lindbergh lunched at the Astor and went from there to the Times building, an impetuous young woman broke through the police lines and threw her arms about the hero, attempting to kiss him. Lindbergh shielded away, blushed and avoided the kiss. The police grabbed the young woman and pulled her away from him.

Whether or not this episode became the basis of a story that continues to grow, I do not know; but the story is this: that when Lindbergh stepped out of the elevator on one of the floors of the Times building a stenographer threw her arms about him and tried to kiss him; and that five minutes later the young lady was fired for "conduct unbecoming a Times employee."

The second time I heard the story, it was not one young woman but two. The third time, the number of young women who had unsuccessfully tried to kiss Lindbergh and had been fired had grown to three, and now, as I understand, the number has grown to five. All five minutes after the episode.

Walter Winchell reports that the night Colonel Lindbergh was entertained at the Long Island home of Clarence Mackaye, he and his mother excused themselves early and went to a party at the Frazer's at which Irving Berlin and Mrs. Berlin (the former Ellen Mackaye), were guests.

The fishermen on the docks along the East River water front are an interesting species. Fishing with them is apparently as much a rite on Saturday afternoons and Sundays as golfing is with brokers. They sit on the docks for hours at a stretch, angling with long poles which they rarely move. The catching of a small perch is a great event. All the other fishermen in the immediate vicinity weight their poles and come to examine it and comment upon it. Most of these fishermen are content to sit on the docks all day long with nary a nibble.

The Players' club revised Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" recently and members of the club had great fun doing it. Those who had no experience in acting, many of them, took part in the mob scenes. Some young women were engaged for the mob scenes also, mostly girls out of college and friends of the members of the club.

Don Marquis was at the costume party to get his toga when he saw a pretty and pert young woman, who told him she had to get two costumes for the play. She was to be a market girl in one scene and in another carry a palm as a slave girl.

"At first they had me down as a 'real virgin,'" she told Marquis. "But they took a good look at me and decided to let me carry a palm."

These brash youngsters have a sense of humor. All honor to them.

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of St. Joseph, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 23 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their household easily, happy homes are the result.

FIREMEN SLUG WIN OVER POSTOFFICE TEAM WEDNESDAY

Firemen slugged their way to a 23 to 8 victory over the Post Office team in the opening game of the "B" division of the Xenia Playground League at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Wednesday night.

Winners piled up a safe lead in the early innings and enjoyed a fat round in the third, scoring eight runs. The firemen scored one or more runs in every inning but the sixth.

The post office nine found Cope, pitcher on the winning team, something of a puzzle, and could do little in an offensive way until the eighth inning when it tallied four times.

Kiwans Club plays Central High School in a soft ball game Thursday night.

Post Office lineup: Cope, c; Gaines, p; McCoy, 1b; Lane, 2b; Love, ss; Christopher, 3b; Davis, 4b; McCormick, cf; Walker, lf. Firemen's lineup: Bauman, c; L. Cope, p; R. Briley, 1b; J. Haller, 2b; Downey, ss; Buffington, 3b; H. Haller, rf; Dickey, cf; Hanftan, lf.

Score by innings: Post Office 201000041—8; Firemen 11843042—23. Umpires—Purdum and Turnbull.

SUPREME COURT TO REVIEW DUGAN CASE

Motion for an order directing the Court of Appeals of Greene County to certify its record in the case of M. J. Dugan against the state of Ohio, was allowed by the State Supreme Court Wednesday.

Dugan, proprietor of a billiard hall and soft drink establishment on N. Whitehall St., was convicted of possession liquor by Mayor John W. Prugh and fined $1,000 and costs.

The conviction was affirmed by Common Pleas Court and the Appellate Court, but Dugan contended Mayor Prugh did not have jurisdiction in the case and attacks the validity of the court.

Oklahoma's Got Bad, Bad Man Again

Not since the days of Al Jennings has life been so interesting in Oklahoma. Matthew Kimes, a shooting fool, is the latest to dedicate his life to the revival of the good old bank robbing days in the Sooner State.

(International Illustrated News)

By L. E. EARLY.
TULSA, Okla. (I-N Special).—There's just a little bit of pride in Oklahoma these days.

For Oklahoma again has a wild, shooting, stealing bad man—a bad man who kidnaps police chiefs, robs banks, and boasts of his crimes.

While his maraudings are a bit of a strain on the smaller communities, nevertheless his presence is a comfort to those who glory in the State's frontier ruggedness and who have long twilted under the jibes of Eastern visitors who have come seeking shooting bandits and scalping Indians, only to find Rotary clubs, sandwich shoppes and garages with New York ideas of charging. In fact, there hasn't been so much local pride in some parts around here since Al Jennings reformed and emigrated to California. The new bad man, Matthew Kimes, just turned twenty-one. Peace officers credit him with all the daring of youth and the skill of experience. He's quick on the draw, and he loves danger. He comes out in the open, apparently, just for the fun of being chased.

Kimes introduced himself a short time ago when he led his gang in a series of raids on banks in Oklahoma and the surrounding States. Each raid was marked by theatrical gun play. As posses formed, the gang retreated into the wooded Osage Hills, where it's most unhealthy to go hunting armed men.

Kimes made one mistake, that of getting married. Bandits should eschew romance. His wedding picture was used to identify him after he was captured in a chase following a bank robbery. Matthew was convicted of murder in connection with the robbery, and his brother, George, was convicted of manslaughter.

Last November six members of his gang laid warlike siege to the Sequoyah County Jail and delivered Matthew. Kimes resumed his guerrilla tactics with renewed vigor. A short time ago he raided the bank in his home town, Bezer, and escaped. An officer was killed and a woman injured.

On June 7 he calmly motored into Pawhuska and parked his car. He was recognized and sped off as a posse formed. When the pursuit got hot, Kimes abandoned his car and went on foot across fields.

He came upon an automobile driven by "Red" Carter, a farmer, just as his pursuers' cars closed in on him. He commandeered Carter's car and, hugging Carter close to him, sped away. Officers held fire to protect Carter, and as soon as Kimes had outdistanced them, he threw Carter out and disappeared in the woods.

A week later George McAninch, head of the peace force at Jennings, stopped a stolen automobile. The driver submitted readily to McAninch and his possemen left. The next thing they saw was the car speeding back through town. McAninch a prisoner. McAninch was found several miles out of town, tied to a tree. The driver had disappeared into the wood again. He was Kimes.

They're still looking for him.

COMPEL INSURANCE OFFICIALS TO PAY BACK BIG SALARIES

State Department To Re- fuse Licenses To Some Firms

COLUMBUS, O., June 23.—William C. Safford, state superintendent of insurance, today was preparing plans designed to compel secretaries and managers of a number of mutual insurance companies, operating in Ohio, to pay back into the treasuries of their respective companies portions of alleged excessive salaries and commissions.

This contemplated action is consistent with the decree issued by the Ohio supreme court here Wednesday upholding the action of the state insurance department in refusing to renew the licenses of the National Mutual Insurance and of the Celina Mutual Casualty companies to operate in Ohio until E. J. Brookhart, Celina secretary and administrative officer of these concerns, paid back alleged excessive salary payments.

The supreme court ordered that, of the $202,000 he received during the past six years, Brookhart should pay back $112,000. The court permitted him to retain $90,000, on the basis of a $15,000 annual salary, it was stated. The annual salaries of officials of similar companies, doing practically the same amount of business, are $2,000 each, it was claimed.

"It is evident that the court is of the opinion that any profits of a

COAL MAGNATE IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

COLUMBUS, O., June 23.—Funeral services were being arranged here today for John Sutphin Jones, 78, president and chairman of the board of the Sunday Creek Coal Co., who died at a local hospital last night after an illness of six weeks from chronic nephritis. Jones, born at Washington C. H., had an eventful career as a railroad man and coal producer in the middle western states. He organized the Jones and Adams Coal Company at Springfield, Ill., and was variously connected with the Wisconsin and Northern, Tavares and Gulf, Seaboard Air Line, Columbus and Hocking Railroads, and also developed a large acreage in Florida, in connection with the Seaboard Air Line railway.

STUDENT KILLED
MILLERSBURG, O., June 23.—Paul Hawkins, 24, was instantly killed when he was crushed by a two-ton block of stone, while working at the Briarhill stone quarry at Glenmont, near here. He was a sophomore at Ohio State University, and had just started to work in the quarry. Another workman with him was injured.

NO FAT MEN JAILED
PEORIA, Ill.—Police officials here are surely perplexed. A weighty problem has their nerves on edge, and the authorities are exercised to decide whether or not they shall build a bigger jail or insist on smaller prisoners. It all started when an incautious policeman arrested Albert Harris of Chicago, who a local innkeeper said, was trying to beat his board bill. Not until the police department aided by a small motor truck, had got Harris as far as the jail was the discovery made that the prisoner was too big for the jail. Harris, who weighs 423 pounds, was pulled and pushed into the doorway, but there he stuck, and the combined efforts of the night force at police headquarters couldn't budge him. Under the strain the prisoner fainted, and it took the fire department to remove his weighty torso from the front entrance.

BENEFICIARY SUES INSURANCE FIRM; TWO SEEK DIVORCES

Joseph Lamb, as beneficiary under an accident insurance policy carried with the defendant company on the life of Mrs. Lou Robinson, for $2,000, has brought suit in Common Pleas Court against the Kentucky Central Life and Accident Insurance Co. to collect $1,500, alleged due on the policy.

Lamb, in the petition, sets forth Mrs. Robinson was accidentally killed in an auto accident January 3, when a car driven by William Robinson, in which she was riding from Dayton to Xenia, collided with a machine driven by the Rev. A. J. Furstenberger.

Mrs. Robinson either jumped prior to the collision to prevent being injured or was knocked out of the car by the impact, but in any event was accidentally killed, the petition recites.

All premiums on the policy have been fully paid, plaintiff declares. He sets forth that he is unable to read or write, that he did not have possession of the policy at any time, and that the insurance firm, taking advantage of his ignorance, compromised the claim with him for $500. Lamb wants the compromise rescinded, and the policy paid in full less the $500 credit. F. L. Johnson is plaintiff's attorney.

TWO SEEK DIVORCE

Willful absence from home for more than three years is charged in a suit for divorce filed in Common Pleas Court by Arthur Bonigar against Augusta Benigar. They were married at Leesburg, O., November 5, 1907, and have three children, Isabella, 17, Bernice Irene, 12, and Irisjane, 6. One child died in infancy. Plaintiff charges the defendant with being a person of vicious and vulgar habits and wholly unfit to be intrusted with the care of the children. He asks custody of the children.

Suit for divorce has been filed by Alberta Osborne against James Osborne on grounds of extreme cruelty. They were married May 5, 1908 and have two children, Thelma and James. Plaintiff charges her husband threatened to strike and mistreat her. Defendant owns a 100-acre farm with a large amount of stock, farm implements and the usual household furniture and plaintiff asks custody of the children, alimony and attorney fees.

GIVEN DIVORCE

Edward Mowen has been granted a divorce from Anna Mowen in Common Pleas Court on grounds of gross neglect of duty.

CONFESS JUDGMENT

Defendant in a suit brought in Common Pleas Court by John T. Harbline, Jr. against Sallie Bell, has confessed judgment for $149.50, due on a promissory note.

Keep in Trim!

Good Elimination Is Essential to Good Health.

THE kidneys are the blood filters. If they fail to function properly there is apt to be a retention of toxic poisons in the blood. A dull, languid feeling, and sometimes, toxic backaches, headaches, and dizziness are symptoms of this condition. Further evidence of improper kidney function is often found in burning or scanty passage of secretions. Each year more and more people are learning the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, in this condition. Scarcely a nook or hamlet anywhere but has many enthusiastic users. Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. Rose Ross Osborne, 68, passed away at her home, 418 E. Third St., Thursday morning at 9:55 o'clock, after a lingering illness, from diabetes.

Another brother, Daniel, died three years ago.

Funeral services will be held Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock, at St. Bridget Church, with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call at the residence of Mrs. Osborne's son, Earl Osborne, 407 E. Second St., anytime after 4 p. m. Friday.

VERDICT UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

Judgment of the Court of Appeals in a suit in Common Pleas Court in awarding Rufus Glass, farmer, $7,108 against The Hartford Insurance Co., Hartford, Conn., on an insurance policy because of the destruction by fire of his farm February 2, 1924, was affirmed by the State Supreme Court Wednesday.

The case has been in litigation for two years and the accruing interest on the principal will bring the total amount to more than $8,000.

At least two other actions by Glass against insurance companies are pending in the courts.

XENIANS UNHURT IN ACCIDENT FATAL TO NEW VIENNA YOUTH

Charles W. Morris, 16, near New Vienna, died at his home Thursday from injuries sustained in an auto collision Wednesday night, the other machine being occupied by Robert and William T. Sackett, sons of Prof. R. J. Sackett, New Burlington Pike, superintendent of the O. S. and S. O. Home Schools.

The accident occurred when young Morris attempted to make a turn into the driveway of his parents' home, according to brief word received at the Sackett home here, were exonerated from blame, it is said.

The Sacketts were on their way to Hillsboro, driving from New Vienna, where their brother, Ross Sackett, lives. Robert Sackett lives with his parents and William Sackett is married and has until recently been located at Three Rivers, Mich. They had been in search of employment at New Vienna shortly before the accident.

A nineteen-year-old brother of the dead Morris boy was uninjured.

MORE THAN 300 AT MEETING OF CLUBS

Three hundred and seventy-five "4H" club members, leaders and parents attended the club rally at the London Prison Farm, Wednesday.

Club members from every township in the county enjoyed the trip. Activities of the day consisted of a picnic dinner, ball game, a tour through the gardens, the main prison building, dairy barns, fish hatcheries and the county experiment farm.

"Heartiest co-operation was the feature of this successful day, on the part of everyone," County Agent J. R. Kimber said. "Leaders and parents deserve the credit for making it possible for club members to attend."

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

We're off for a picnic and a lot of fun. And we won't come back 'till the set of sun!

Such were the thoughts of the Ritzies as they clambered up on the hayrack that was to carry them out to the Methodist Sunday school picnic. The twins, Rag and Tag, weren't Methodists, but Patsy, Mary, Bill and Betty Ann were and their teacher had said it would be all right for them to invite the twins.

The hayrack was packed full of boys and girls and as everybody knew everybody else, it was great fun. The boys were always pretending that they were going to push the girls off and though the girls weren't really frightened, they screamed at the top of their voices at every little poke. That is, all except Patsy. She was so used to climbing trees and fences and doing acrobatic stunts that she wasn't a bit scared when the boys tipped her side of the wobbly hayrack.

"Where are we going?" asked Tag of his nearest neighbor, as he

By the time the boys and girls, and the teacher as well, had gotten untangled, they found that they had arrived at their destination and that the rack had stopped beside an old, tumbled-down mill which still had a stream of water trickling through it.

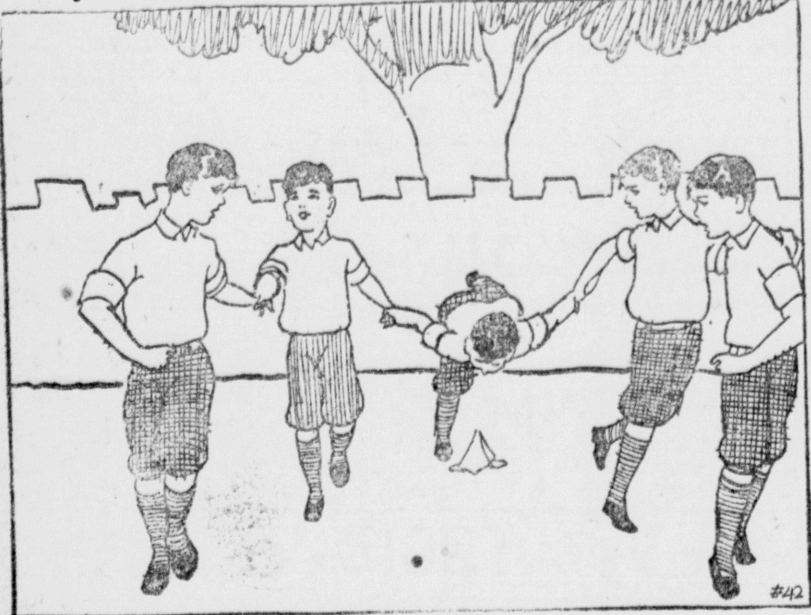

They all tumbled out and the boys raced up and down while the girls picked bouquets of wild flowers.

"Let's have a race to start off the picnic," called Miss Robertson, the teacher, as she gathered them together. "What shall it be?"

"A chariot race," piped up Tag, who was so used to making suggestions for the Ritzie club that he was always ready with an idea.

"Our visitor has a fine suggestion," answered the teacher. "We will start with a chariot race." She divided the boys and girls into groups of five, as Tag explained the rules of the game.

"One person is the chariot driver, and he is pulled by four others who are the horses, two pulling hauled his feet over the side of the rack, trying to kick all the weeds as they went along.

"Out to the old mill in Davey's woods," answered the boy. "There's a good swimmin' hole there, but the teacher said we couldn't go because we'd all have to stick together and play games."

"Isn't that the old, haunted mill?" asked Tag, who was always ready for anything exciting.

"Sure," answered the boy, "but there aren't any ghosts around in the daytime. I think that's why the teacher wants us to stay together, though."

Upon hearing such exciting news, Tag worked his way up to the front of the hayrack where his twin brother, Rag, and Marty were sitting beside the driver.

"Did you know that we are going to the old haunted mill?" he asked of Marty, his fellow Ritzie.

"Sure," answered Marty, "but I don't think it's haunted any more. You don't ever hear anything about it."

Their whispered conversation was brought to an abrupt end as the hayrack, in an effort to cross a narrow creek that led to the main mill stream, rocked from side to side and hurled everybody into the center of the rack.

from each side. The driver of each chariot sets up a handkerchief in wagwag fashion on the goal line. When the starting signal is given, the chariots race down the course, and as the horses slow at the curving goal line, the driver picks up the handkerchief with his teeth without releasing the grip of either hand. The team wins that crosses the finish line with its team intact," explained Tag.

This sounded like a real race and everybody entered into it with spirit. One game followed another and it wasn't until late in the afternoon that Patsy came running up to her brother with this startling question, "Where are the twins?"

Marty thought hard before he said, "Why, come to think of it, I haven't seen them since the finish of the chariot race." Grabbing his sister and Betty Ann by the hand, he started in search of the twins who had so mysteriously disappeared.

He didn't say a word about his conversation with Tag about the old mill being haunted to the girls and he tried not to think of it as he started the search for his fellow Ritzies.

Read in tomorrow's paper what happened to the twins!

YOUTHFUL ALASKAN AVIATOR PLANS SEARCH FOR GOLD OVER AIR ROUTE

WICHITA, Kan., June 24.—For the first time in history an airplane will be used this summer in a gold hunt. C. F. Crawford, youthful flier of Fairbanks, Alaska, is now in Wichita supervising construction of a Swallow biplane to carry him and five other persons into an uninhabited part of Alaska. On August 1 they will leave Fairbanks in the ship to explore a basin in the Edouard mountain range between Kobak and Noatak rivers in northern Alaska.

National geological survey parties explored the region in 1913 and maps made by them will be used by the six Alaskans in their hunt for gold, oil and coal. As gold has been found in gravel at the mouth of the two rivers to be explored, the Alaskans feel that there is a concentrated deposit of gold in the district they expect to explore.

Crawford, who will fly the Swallow to Little in July and ship it to Fairbanks from there, has been in the flying game four years. He is 29 years old.

MASONIC BODIES TO ATTEND SERVICES

Following annual custom, Xenia and Greene County Masonic bodies will unite in celebration of St. John's Day, Sunday, by attending services at Christ Episcopal Church in a body Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Rev. C. O. Nybladh will preach.

Masons will first meet at the lodge rooms at 10 o'clock before proceeding to the church. All sons of Xenia and the county are invited to attend.

MAKING MODERN MENUS

GOOD COFFEE

Whatever the method employed, the coffee grounds should be in contact with the water the shortest possible time. Coffee should not be used in a metal container to be at its best. This statement is modified by another to the effect that the difference in taste between infusions brewed in metallic and non-metallic containers is often so slight as to be unobtrusive.

The coffee grounds themselves should be kept fresh, carefully preserved in an airtight can or container. The best coffee is bought in the bean and ground as needed at home. It should be ground according to the method by which it is to be prepared. For percolation a little finer grind. For dripping the coffee should be pulverized. The proportions of coffee and water used vary according to the brand of coffee preferred by the family. Only experience will show the exact proportions required to produce a perfectly brewed cup of coffee. The general rule is six level tablespoons of coffee to a quart of water.

WOMAN ARRESTED

COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—A woman giving the name of Mrs. Evelyn Holshue, was held by police here today, on a charge of deserting an infant, which was left on a doorstep here several days ago. The woman told police she was unable to buy milk for the child, but said a man with whom she was living was not her husband and was not the child's father.

The Theatre

An old saying has it that the best way to win the heart and hand of a man is through his stomach. The ancient prescription for love still works wonders, but what should a girl do when her favored beau takes his meals out?

Constance Talmadge, star of "Dejeuner de Soleil" now being filmed at the United Artists studios, looks with celluloid contempt on the time-worn adage and instead employs the green-eyed monster jealousy in a futile attempt to regain the affection of her lover.

"Dejeuner de Soleil" (Breakfast at Sunrise) is an amusing farce of sophisticated Paris and is being directed by Mal St. Clair, a master in interpreting that form of drama. One of the strongest supporting casts in months surrounds the star. In addition to Alvarado, the film has such noted players as Bryant Washburn, Marie Dressler, Alice White, Burr McIntosh, Nellie Bly Baker, Paulette Goddard, David Mir and "Tippy" Gray, co-composer of the dance sensation, "Valencia."

Paramount is still trying to catch up with a girl to play Lorelei in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Esther Ralston, Laura La Plante, Constance Talmadge and several hundred other actresses have been suggested during the search, but whether either Anita Luos, author of the book, or Jesse Lasky has decided on a girl for the part, no one yet knows. The suggested names are still being perused by Paramount officials and, as production work on the picture is scheduled to start in the early fall, a selection is due to be made within the next few weeks. Of course, thousands of non-professionals want the part.

Have you noticed in recent months how some of the old timers have come forward? We mean the character actors, the villains, the comedians and other folks—that is, old in the movie sense—who suddenly have become stars of the first order. Charles Murray and George Sidney are doing it for First National and a host of them are doing it for Paramount. Take a look over these names, now drawing thousands of movie fans all over the country, and see if you don't agree that the veterans who worked so hard for so many years have, at last, come into their own: Wallace Beery, Raymond Hutton, Chester Conklin, W. C. Fields, Ford Sterling, Noah Beery, Belle Ben- net, Mary Carr, Len Chaney, Ernest Torrence, J. Farrell MacDonald and our old friend Francis X. Bushman.

It all has come about through the public's demand for bigger and better comedies and character pictures. And they are certainly being accommodated with some of the finest comedies ever made. Beery and Hutton, Conklin and George Bancroft, Conklin and W. C. Fields, are the central characters in some of the funniest pictures we've ever seen and more good ones are on the way.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Philip Wynne Tracy IV has had a childish engagement with Natalie Jones. Becoming interested in Lyra Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's, he falls in love with her. Natalie overhearing him making love to Lyra, breaks her engagement. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because America enters the World War.

Phil is one of the first to enlist. Just before leaving for France, Phil meets Natalie again, they plan to be married. The immediate departure of the troops, however, prevents this. Phil's regiment is sent to the front soon and he is wounded, winning the cross de guerre.

After the armistice Phil is awarded a scholarship in a French university and while in Paris he comes face to face with his mother, who has come to France to hunt him. Major Auckland, who is devoted to Anne Tracy, accompanies her.

In talking things over, Mrs. Tracy learns with dismay that Philip intends to marry a rich French divorcee with a four-year-old child. She refuses to give her consent to the marriage—until after Phil is twenty-one.

Phil compromises with his mother. If she will refuse Major Auckland's proposal of marriage, he will give up Phil for two years. Mrs. Tracy agrees and Phil goes to tell Pat. Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER I

GOOD-BY, SWEETHEART, GOOD-BY

PHILIP WYNNE TRACY IV met Madam Pat just as she was going out of her apartment.

"You didn't expect me back so soon, did you dear?" he asked with a smile.

Pat's face had been very sad, but at sight of Philip's famous smile she told herself she had been worrying for nothing; that everything would be all right.

"Wynne, darling, you do love me, don't you? When you left me this morning I was sure you didn't love me any more, but now that you have come back to tell me you do, I am sorry for doubting you."

She stopped—her intuition told her that something was wrong.

"Where are you going, Pat—anywhere in particular? I have something very important to say to you. Let's go for a walk in the Bois."

Pat halted in the doorway, and instead of answering, she searched his face. Then she fell into step with her lover.

As he walked beside her, Philip Tracy looked at her carefully, not realizing that the moment a man begins to look at a woman critically, that moment you may be sure his passion has begun to cool.

She was not beautiful. She was distinguished, and she had the free carriage of an American girl instead of the French woman. Just now, however, she had lost much of her vivacity and verve. She sensed, before Philip spoke, that the end had come.

She told herself that she had not thought that Philip could be so cruel as to come back to tell her they were to part this morning. For the thousandth time she asked herself why she had kept him at her apartment last night. She tried to excuse it by thinking that she had not wanted to send him back to the hotel when he had been drinking so much.

All at once she realized that he had not told her he loved her in answer to her fervent question, and the color dyed her face in great waves. She was ashamed. Slightly she pulled away from him and found that he was so preoccupied with his own thoughts that he did not notice.

THE two walked along for quite a way in silence, and then Pat said timidly, "I know what you would say to me, dear, but please don't talk about it now. When you meet me at the door, I was coming out here where I could think."

"Wynne, once I believed I was the happiest woman in the world, and now I know I am the most miserable. In my heart I have known for a long while that it could never be—that I could never be your wife, and because each day and each hour I realized it more and more, I think I became insane. That perhaps was the reason I asked you to come into my apartment last night. This morning when sanity came back to me I knew that I had lost you."

"As far as I am concerned, Wynne, this is the parting."

"Pat, Pat, why do you torment yourself? You are altogether mistaken. It would be foolish to try and tell you that my mother has not always objected to our marriage, but this afternoon when I got back to the hotel we came to a compromise."

"I am going home with her to America for two years. If then you want me, dear, I will come back to you."

"You won't come back. I shall always love you, but you won't come back."

AN angry color flooded Phil's face. "Don't you believe me?" he asked.

"Yes, dear, I believe that you believe you will come now, but two years is an eternity to lovers, especially when the ocean divides them. Some Englishman has said that 'Absence makes the heart grow fonder,' but no Frenchman ever made such a declaration. He would know it was not true. Wynne, I know that you love me now, and I know that I love you, but how long we shall love each other, I cannot tell."

"Don't start away from me, I am not doubting myself. I cannot tell whether I shall love you next year or even next month. Dearest, it is better that neither of us should be fettered, and so I am going to say good-bye."

"But, Pat, you cannot turn me off like this, after what has been between us."

"It is because of what has been between us that I am giving you up. Until this morning I have been living in a beautiful dream. These past few months have been the happiest of my life. Today I know the dream can never come true. I am not sure that such dreams ever come true."

"My mother would never be reconciled to you as my husband—your mother would never be reconciled to me as your wife, and although families do not mean much when one is as passionately in love as I have been, they mean a good deal when people are married and have time to remember and regret."

"But I will not marry your family, Pat," Phil remonstrated, "and you will not marry mine. We will just marry each other."

"Yes, dear, we would both marry each other's family. A man and a woman may love each other singly, but when they marry they marry the whole of each other's family. Don't shake your head, Wynne, dear. Think back to you to come into my apartment last night. This morning when sanity came back to me I knew that I had lost you."
